Violence avoided at racist rally

Signs of support

Two busloads of B'Nai Brith members arrived at the Gull River on Sunday morning to thank the citizens of Minden and Haliburton County for speaking out against racism. The group, which also included Holocaust survivors, also wanted to spread the message that hatred can grow if people stay silent. After speeches by the river, the group walked through town, stopping by the Minden United Church to deliver a special thanks to Ed Moll.

Lobby group formed to protest lack of funding for new school buildings

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A lobby committee has been formed to protest the provincial government's decision to reject capital funding requests by the Haliburton County Board of Education to meet the need for new buildings.

In May it was announced that the county would receive no accommodation funding for the next three years. Previously, school boards would submit a five-year forecast each October and receive a response for one year. Now the Ministry of Education announces its allocations over a three-year period, and the county didn't meet approval for any of the province's $300-million building fund.

Two accommodation committees, for Minden and Haliburton, have already been activated to meet during the summer to look at various alternatives to house the county's growing school population.

Although student enrollment has increased, provincial funding has been at a standstill. Approved by the board at last Tuesday's meeting, the lobby group is being formed out of the resulting frustration, says board chairperson Wendy Ladurantaye. Appointed to the lobby committee are Ladurantaye, Bicroff/Cardiff Trustee Linda Mumford and Lutterworth Trustee Cheryl Murdoch.

"We've done everything by the book, and it's still not getting us anywhere," says Ladurantaye. "We put together a package of facts on Haliburton County and submitted it to the ministry, but we haven't gotten any results."

Ladurantaye cites an Ontario Public School Board Association (OPSBA) survey on finances for 1989, and says funding doesn't seem to be distributed fairly. With an enrollment increase of 1.1 per cent, Grey County received a 3.8 per cent increase in grants. Enrollment increased 6 per cent in the county, with grants increasing only 0.01 per cent.

"The grants are meant to account for increased school enrollment. If the ministry were following that, we would be getting the funding. We've played by all the rules. Now maybe it's time to be more vocal."

Because of overall cuts in provincial operating grants this year, municipal councils were faced with education levy increases from 7.3 to 20 per cent while drafting their budgets. Although taxpayers have generally been understanding about these increases, Ladurantaye says there are still a few who resent paying for education.

Ladurantaye has attended the meetings of several cottagers' associations to discuss the problem, and has received much positive response. "Some cottagers want to know why their taxes are going up for services they don't use."

Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Association (FOCA) President Jean Anthon has spoken out to support the school boards and municipalities which are facing a struggle. "She's tremendous," says Ladurantaye. "At a meeting, one lady questioned whether children in Haliburton County should be going on trips

80 skinheads chant 'Sieg Heil' and wave swastika flag as cross burns

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Shortly after hundreds of people oohed and ahhed over Minden's Canada Day fireworks display, a 10-metre-high burning cross lit up the night sky over John Beattie's Bobcaygeon Road property. Approximately 80 skinheads chanted "Sieg Heil, Sieg Heil" and "What do we want? White power! When do we want it? Now!" while others waved a swastika flag.

It was not Canada Day as most people wanted it, but after the weekend's display of hatred, the community had to accept the fact a white supremacist, neo-Nazi rally had actually been held in its midst.

Despite John Beattie's assurance this was only going to be a "small gathering" of friends, the former leader of the Canadian Nazi Party was seen hugging and greeting the skinheads as they arrived by car or in two buses, one from Quebec, the other from Toronto. Many of them were teenagers, dressed in black or army fatigues. The only older gentleman, John Ross Taylor, has been previously charged with spreading hate propaganda and is the co-founder of the British People's League with Beattie. Taylor supposedly was the guest speaker.

The rally started Friday night, when a band played for a small group of skinheads. The sounds of a chainsaw and hammering were also heard, assumed to be the cross being built. The next morning, Beattie's three children played outside until more skinheads and the press arrived. A bust of Sir John A. MacDonald, complete with one of Beattie's Union Jack hats, stood in the doorway, but most people stayed outside.

A "security" force, sporting billy clubs and knives, guarded the driveway to the 1.6 acre property. One of them wore a t-shirt which read "Brutal Attack...Ku Klux Klan" and had the Klan's cross on it. Some of the cars had covered license plates. Most were from Ontario but there were also Quebec, New York and New Jersey plates.

The beer drinking started immediately and continued throughout the day and evening, along with the loud music. Whenever Beattie came to the front of the house, reporters asked him for a statement but Beattie ignored them. Occasionally he would yell at the skinheads if they exchanged insults with the press and later in the afternoon, he kicked three skinheads off the property. Beattie also yelled at reporters, warning them not to trespass. "You people induced into crossing onto this private property might be surprised at what happens, worms that you are."

One skinhead told reporters they could go "down to the city" (Anson, Hindon and Minden's municipal office) to get a map of the property. He then described where the lot lines were and was wrong on many counts. When asked what a road allowance was, he stomped away.

While four-letter words peppered a lot of the taunts, in some ways the language was no worse than that heard at hockey games. "Go suck on a bottle of Geritol" was the best retort one skinhead could come up with to an older woman's insult. Others came up with worse statements: "Our white God is praying for us."

More yelling took place that night, when a handful of residents arrived. The language was more vitriolic after the cross was burnt (an act often performed by the KKK. Sieg heil was a Nazi greeting for victory.) Residents were incensed by such an act, which Beattie had promised his landlord would never occur. A Letter to the Editor from the landlord explains what steps are being taken now.

At 9:30, a security guards crossed the street to one of the patrol cars parked in Larry and Maxine Kent's driveway. He told the officer they were about to join in the activities so would the police please watch over the entranceway. Guards were left by the fence, flashing lights into the crowd and at one point, getting nervous when the Toronto Sun reporter walked down the road and out of sight. Two skinheads jumped over the fence and walked down the road, shining the lights into the bush to ensure the reporter wasn't trying

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

After a busy holiday weekend, the Minden OPP reported 16 injuries in eight different accidents, however Staff Sergeant Adam says the number of injuries is low.

"With the weather being so good, the county was full of people," he says. "When you consider there were probably 100,000 cars in the area, that's not too many accidents."

"We don't like to see injuries, but if people wore their seatbelts it would help."

The district RIDE team from Peterborough was in operation on Saturday, detecting eight impaired drivers and making eight liquor seizures. Local officers laid three more impaired charges.

Sgt. Adam says the number of impaired driving charges was higher than normal (usually there is only three or four per weekend), and the increase is probably not due to more drinking and driving, but better enforcement.

"If it hadn't been for the district RIDE program, eight of those drivers wouldn't have been detected," he says. "Our officers are kept busy with regular occurrences alone."

The following people were charged with impaired driving:

Bruce Sacheski of Minden; Greg Clarke of Scarborough; Paul Obrovac of Hamilton, Roy Powell of Minden (charged with impaired operation of a boat); Dwight Angiers of Norland; Vincent Rice of Scarborough; Nicholas Weninger of Toronto; John Hubbard of Oshawa; Keith Kellett of Minden; and Marlene Couture of Minden.

Community reaffirms its belief in tolerance

People say yes to equality, fairness

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Like a mother scolding a naughty child, Betty Dionne really let the skinhead have it.

Along with two cohorts, the young man dressed in black pants, white shirt and black suspenders, was being allowed to spread his white supremacist message via the television cameras. The gathering at Minden's Village Green was supposed to be an opportunity for local residents to voice their outrage that a neo-Nazi, racist rally was being held on John Beattie's rented property on Bobcaygeon Road. But when the three members of the Nationalist Party arrived, the media encircled them and asked questions about their racist views.

"My blood was boiling," Mrs. Dionne says. "I was frustrated, I was upset these goons were here and I couldn't see him speaking his beliefs without someone counteracting them."

And so she took one of the posters which had been circulated throughout the village by the Minden Times and made him read the message: "YES. As a citizen of Canada and a member of this community, I believe in equality of all individuals regardless of race, colour, creed, religion or ethnic origin."

At first the young man said "Canader." "Don't knock our country," Mrs. Dionne told him, oblivious of the cameras which were bearing down on them. He said Canada. Then he tried to cut out some parts of the message. Mrs. Dionne told him he hadn't read it properly. "I've read it, are you deaf," the skinhead said. "No, and my ears are about as big as your mouth," Mrs. Dionne replied.

"Hey Nazi, go home—and jump in the river on your way," shouted Minden legion member Ken Walsh. He later expressed disappointment that no Minden councillors were present at the community rally. "At least they could have shown up and showed us their support."

Approximately 50 people did attend the gathering, which was hastily organized last Tuesday when B'Nai Brith's Lorne Shipman and Eric Whist of the Race Relations Board met with concerned citizens to discuss how the town should react.

"We are shocked that (Beattie's) rally should take place among us," said Rev. Edward Moll, representing the Haliburton County Ministerial Association. "Many of us have felt helpless, not knowing what to do. Nevertheless, we categorically oppose the doctrines of racism and white supremacy. We resolutely affirm our commitment to

to take pictures of the activities.

The closest threat of violence occurred when some young local men started yelling at the skinheads who were standing by the gate. The skinheads responded and would have jumped onto the road for a fight had the police not sent the local youths away. After midnight, the youths were seen walking up the road stuffing ropes tied into nooses up the back of their shirts and trying to hide stones. The police turned them back before they reached the property and there were no incidents later that evening.

A band started playing again just before 11 o'clock on Sunday morning but quit shortly thereafter. The Quebec bus, with approximately 30 occupants left at noon but was not allowed to go into town, where members of the Jewish organization, B'Nai Brith were holding a rally. Police had set up a check point at the Scotch Line Road and asked everyone where they were going and why. (Apparently, access to Beattie's had also been cut off on Saturday night.) The Toronto bus left a few hours later and by late afternoon everything was quiet. Beattie spent part of the next morning cleaning up the yard.

"We did have some extra patrols in but we didn't have to activate our contingency plan," says acting Minden Staff Sergeant, Steve Adam. "We feel quite pleased (with the way the weekend went). We did what we set out to do—keep the peace and stop any confrontation from occurring."

Holocaust victims remember Nazism, say it can't be allowed to happen again

equality and fairness.

"We have written letters to the editors of the newspapers, we have spoken with each other, we have made and distributed posters claiming Haliburton County as part of the global family, our newspapers have denounced this rally in editorials, we assure the minorities who live among us they need not feel isolated, threatened or rejected, and as you see, we are meeting today as concerned citizens.

"We are gathered here today to say no to racism, yes to the equality rally. "We all have to be involved and support them."

The next public rally was held on Sunday morning, when two busloads of B'Nai Brith members and Holocaust survivors arrived. With placards reading "B'Nai Brith thanks the concerned citizens of Minden," "We remember the six million," "Never again," they gathered on the south shore of the Gull River. After speeches from several members denouncing racism, they walked to the United Church to thank Rev. Moll and the congregation for their support.

which Minden did by speaking out and letting Beattie know his views were not condoned.

Many were afraid the people from B'Nai Brith would travel up to Beattie's house, where a fight was sure to be started. But Shipman said he invited people from the membership who would avoid such violence. "We didn't want to sink to Beattie's level of confrontation."

"I've never met John Beattie so I don't feel a hatred towards him personally, but I do hate what he says. He believes I should be exterminated and that's not an easy thing to forgive," said Carey Miller, as he marched back towards the river.

When asked why he wanted to attend the rally, Miller said "The Nazis are getting together and I had a lot of family I didn't meet. I feel it's my responsibility to do something about it. It makes me feel very angry and it also amazes me it can be done."

Rachel Skrobasky is one of those people who almost didn't make it. Six sisters, two brothers and her mother died in the concentration camps, and for a reason she hasn't discerned yet, she was the only one to survive.

"I guess someone was bound to survive," she said, tears always threatening to brim over her eyes. "But if they'd had more time, no one would be left."

She was just 12 when she was taken from her home in Poland and put on a cattle car going to Auschwitz, one of the most famous concentration camps in Hitler's Germany. Not concentration camp, she says, extermination camp. When the Nazis sensed the end of the war was coming, the crematoria were going "night and day, night and day."

"I don't think anyone can understand" what it was like, says Mrs. Skrobasky, who still has nightmares about those years and bears a tattooed number on her forearm as a constant reminder. "If we were to forget, these things would happen over and over again... What we expect is people to understand and react and do something" when people like Beattie rear their ugly heads.

It's when she talks of Beattie and his rally that the intensity of her pain is apparent. "I wish he would burn in hell, the hell I went through, nothing else. I wish it upon him and whoever believes in his doctrines. I can't even call him a human being."

To Mrs. Skrobasky, an ideal world would say "Racism should have no place anywhere, any time. White, black, yellow, green, whatever faith they want—as long as the people care and they are free to live their lives without hurting someone else."

Minden comes close to this ideal, as demonstrated by the support the locals have shown, she says. "The people are beautiful, all beautiful."

"When I first heard the news about the rally I was shocked, horrified and very, very angry. I was convinced that silence wasn't an appropriate response so I got on the phone and talked to everyone I knew."

ty of all human beings; no to intolerance, yes to our diversity; no to hatred and violence, and yes to our common human dignity."

"When I first heard the news about the rally, I was shocked, horrified and very, very angry," said Sheila Ziman, who thought her year-long sabbatical in Haliburton would be a peaceful break from the city. "I was convinced that silence wasn't an appropriate response so I got on the phone and talked to everyone I knew. I wanted to contact as many visible and non-visible minorities as possible. I didn't want anyone to feel alone; there are many people who care."

"This cannot be seen as something where only the Jewish people are involved," said Catherine Denholm when asked why she attended the

Teddy bears to assist local police officers

by ANNE HEWITT

Staff Reporter

The Minden OPP will soon be equipping its patrol cars with the bear essentials—cute, cuddly teddy bears to comfort children who have been traumatized.

One bear, sporting a ribbon marked OPP, will be placed in each patrol car, and every police boat. An officer responding to a call in which a child was a victim or a witness to an incident, and is upset, can give the child a bear to hold. It is hoped the bear will help form a bond between the police officer and the child.

"Nothing is more comforting to a child than a cuddly bear," says Acting Staff Sergeant Steve Adam of the Minden OPP. "And if it makes them feel better, it makes everyone feel better."

The child will be able to keep the bear, and the police will re-order them as necessary. Sgt. Adam says in this area the bears would only be needed "half a dozen" times each year, and the officers will have to use their discretion when giving out the toys.

"We're not just going to give a bear to every kid on the street to make them happy with the police," he says.

The bears, made by Binkley Toys in Hamilton, have been shipped to district headquarters in Peterborough, and will be distributed to the local detachments within the next few weeks. They are part of a "Good Bears on Patrol" program sponsored by the "Good Bears of the World"—a charitable organization, with local chapters in Ontario.

New Staunworth apartments provide affordable housing for local seniors

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

Another successful step towards affordable housing in the Minden area was taken last Wednesday when the Staunworth Terrace senior citizens' apartment complex was officially opened.

The name of the building is an amalgamation of the three sponsoring municipalities, STAnhope, ANson, HIndon and MInden and Lutterworth. One of the main features of the building is an $11,000 memorial clock intended to honour the early pioneers who settled the area. And architect Vas Kuchar presented a painting to be hung in the building's lobby.

Led by piper George Cooper, involved in the ceremony were Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Ray Moore, Lutterworth Reeve Carol Puffer, Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis, County Warden Keith Tallman, Victoria-Haliburton MPP John Eakins (representing Housing Minister Chaviva Hosek), MP Bill Scott (representing Minister of State Alan Redway) and Staunworth housing committee chairman Ed Pergolas.

Those present were treated to a tour through a few of the 32 non-profit apartments, and a reception afterward where some of the 400 people who have assisted in the $2.4-million development of Staunworth had a chance to speak.

Eakins told a group of about 75 people that non-profit housing is well-supported by provincial and federal government programs, where subsidies cover "the difference between the dollars the non-profit corporation needs to pay all its bills, including the mortgage, and the money it collects in rents." The total annual subsidy for the building is estimated at more than $268,000.

Four apartments in the building are offered at the average market rent for Minden, said Eakins. Any senior or disabled person in the area may apply to rent these apartments if there is a vacancy. The remaining units are offered with rents geared to the household income of the tenants.

"In this way, the people living here represent a mix of incomes similar to those in the general community," Eakins said buildings like "People in Ontario take great pleasure in coming here," said Scott. "Many have chosen the county as their permanent residence. You are supplying their wishes and desires by offering a cozy atmosphere to live in and an ideal spot for a leisurely life."

"The population in Haliburton County has increased by leaps and bounds, and it's the people who have made it great."

Warden Tallman said the townships should be commended for

"We have already petitioned the Ministry to take action to start a new building," says Staunworth Chairman Ed Pergolas. "Hopefully in four years we'll be back for another opening."

Staunworth are a result of a partnership of non-profit housing corporations, the Ministry of Housing and the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

"Buildings such as this one attest to the success of the partnership. About 600 non-profit groups, in more than 300 municipalities, are involved in this community-based housing..."

"The government has a commitment to provide decent, affordable housing around Ontario," he added, noting that the province is working on Homes Now, a $3-billion initiative which gives non-profit housing sponsors access to funding at below market interest rates.

Scott said there are many people moving to the area for their retirement years, and commended those who've "had the foresight in arranging senior citizens' apartments in Haliburton County."

a "tremendous job in the construction of a beautiful, magnificent building."

Reeve Puffer also commented on the appearance of Staunworth Terrace. "On behalf of Lutterworth, it's amazing to have the opportunity to visualize the building in completion, and the clock really tops it perfectly. I'm very proud to have participated and wish the residents many years of happiness."

Reeve Davis said the building is "a wonderful thing for Haliburton" and joked, "I'm not far away from moving into one of those units myself."

Pergolas commended Alex Stevenson for his work on the clock fundraising committee, and said work has already begun to get funding for another building.

"We have already petitioned the ministry to take action to start a new building. Hopefully, in four years we'll be back for another opening."

Community involvement is needed to combat drug problems, one-man task force discovers

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Although illegal drug use among teenagers is on the decline, the use of more expensive drugs like cocaine is growing among the affluent adult community. The way to combat this increasing drug problem is through complete community involvement, and by making the use of drugs as socially unacceptable as smoking has become.

That was the message of Muskoka-Georgian Bay MPP Ken Black, guest speaker at a meeting of Minden's Rotary Club at the community centre last week. Black shared information he has gathered since being appointed special advisor to Premier David Peterson last year after completing a one-man task force on the use of illegal drugs in August.

The study was initiated after the death of a 14-year-old Metropolitan Toronto boy, Benji Hayward, who drowned in Lake Ontario. Benji's body was found three days after a rock concert at the CNE Stadium. An inquest later revealed the boy had been consuming alcohol, marijuana and LSD (lysergic acid diethylamide), a hallucinogen, at the concert.

"Why did his death cause such controversy?" Black asked. "Because Benji wasn't special. He could have been the son of any one of you. He wasn't a street kid and he wasn't a druggie. He had just started experimenting with drugs three or four months prior to his death."

"Benji was a kid who could very well have come from one of your homes."

Black stressed that illegal drug use occurs in all communities, and "isn't a problem that can be shifted to Metro or downtown Toronto."

During the study Black travelled throughout Ontario and discussed the problem with a wide range of people—from OPP and RCMP officers, to judges, doctors, social workers and even management at the Ford Motor Company in Windsor to find out about problems drug use causes on the production line. He also contacted FBI and drug enforcement agencies in the United States.

Black also learned a lot about drug use while he was a school principal in the 1960s. "I was around while a lot of you were probably ex-

50. "These people were affluent and well-to-do, driving Mercedes, Cadillacs and Jaguars and paying $140 for a line of cocaine."

The demand for cocaine has increased with the dollar-orientated yuppie generation. "Affluence has become part of the problem. Those people have more money to spend on drugs."

Black cited the province as using the largest number of medical prescription drugs than any other area. Over-the-counter medications are also frequently abused. "Societraffickers in jail and keep them there. But law enforcement can't do the job alone. There aren't enough police officers, and there isn't enough room in the jails."

And police officers are only scratching the surface in controlling the drug problem. "The best we can expect from law enforcement is to hold the line and keep communities safe."

Before the problem can ever be solved, it must be prevented through parent education, said Black.

"Teachers and law enforcement officers can't solve the problem alone. The only one who can solve it is you."

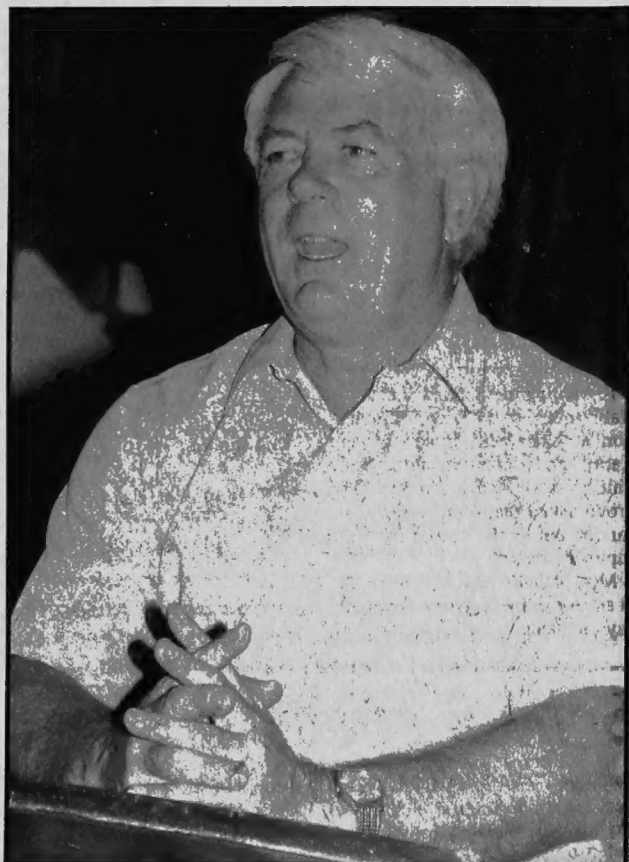

"The problem of illegal drug use is large and it's draining our pocket-books. We need to provide young people with sound decision-making skills. They need the self-esteem to say no. They have to know how to make an individual decision."

"We have to do to drug abuse what we've done to tobacco and that's to make it socially unacceptable."

If you went to a party several years ago, Black says the coffee table would be lined with packages of cigarettes. "Now the percentage of smokers has gone from 75 per cent down to 25 per cent. That's through education, law enforcement and peer pressure. All of us have been involved."

Black compared and contrasted the anti-smoking movement with campaigns against drinking and driving. "The statistics weren't quite as good for drinking and driving, but the idea is the same. We want people to know this behaviour is bad, and that it's not what you're doing to yourself, but to others. Self-respect and respect for other people."

Calling on churches, service clubs and educators to find solutions, Muskoka-Georgian Bay MPP Ken Black was guest speaker at a Minden Rotary Club meeting last Monday. Black has been special advisor to Premier David Peterson since completing a one-man drug task force.

Black recommended the formation of community action groups. "You're the ones who live in the community. You know the people."

He also recommended starting drug education with primary school children, "not to give kids the facts about drugs. They know all that already. We need to give them the ability to say no through self esteem. Slogans don't help. They need to actually practice actions so they can say no to their peers."

Then the parents should get involved, says Black. "Education isn't enough until it's reinforced at home and reinforced in the community."

And stiffer sentences are needed through strengthening the Young Offenders' Act, says Black. "I don't believe in throwing kids in jail. But if a 14 or 15-year-old kid in Toronto sells cocaine that kills people, a seven day jail sentence won't prevent it from happening again."

Young people, parents, teachers, service clubs and community organizations must get together to fight illegal drug use. "This is your problem, and you have to be part of the solution."

Black said 18 of the 29 recommendations in his report have been acted upon by the government.

Still, no government funding is being made available to the preven-

GUILFORD BOY GIFT SHOPPE

VISIT THE LOG HOUSE IN WEST GUILFORD

Guilford Boy Gift Shoppe is located between Green and Pine Lakes in the small country town of West
Guilford, off 118 Hwy., just 8 miles from Haliburton Village.

We are in the heart of vacation country where tourists, summer cottagers and campers are finding our new gift shop very quaint and beautiful.

Guilford Boy is named after a stand-ardbred race horse which did very well in Canada and went on to set records in the United States in the early 1900's. He was owned by George Barry, who was the proprietor's Great-Grandfather.
Look for our collector plates of Guilford Boy this year.

We have a very picturesque two-storey log building with heavy pine beams. We feature the country look with country decorating comforter sets, placemats, chair pads and accessories, and lots of gifts and treasures to take home after your holiday.

More of our gifts are Canadian.
These include artists' oil paintings, silver jewellery, souvenirs, brass, crystal, wood carvings, collectibles and wicker. Added this year is wooden lawn furniture for your pleasure.

Come in and browse and meet our friendly personnel.

We have a lovely little town with stores and restaurants, campgrounds and golf club. Lots of fun and lots of parking.

Air quality at Minden primary school is questioned by concerned parents

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

Air quality in the Archie Stouffer Primary School is so poor it's affecting the concentration and health of students, say representatives of the Home and School association.

Presenting their complaints to the Haliburton County Board of Education at last week's meeting were Kathy and John Stainton, Judy Phillips and Kathy Arbour. The group asked that improvements be carried out at the school over the summer break.

Mrs. Stainton reviewed the results of an air quality study done over two days in January by inspector Tom Reddering of the Health Unit. In his report, the level of carbon dioxide (a gas formed by the burning of carbon breathed out in respiration) was 2,400 parts per million. Reddering says levels of more than 1,000 ppm can affect people, and better ventilation is needed.

Noting articles in Harrowsmith and the Toronto Star, Mrs. Stainton said studies show that poor ventilation can cause headaches, drowsiness and poor concentration. "It's becoming an issue everywhere. Fresh air is really important to learning abilities, so something must be done."

According to Reddering's report, the building's air circulation is so poor that there is a distinct difference in temperature change within its six rooms. He also states that one of the building's air intake vents is located above a storage area for cleaning supplies in the janitorial room. If these were to spill, fumes would be issued throughout the school.

Reddering suggests that steps be taken to improve circulation, ventilation and fresh intake of air, and that further testing be done to ensure that the steps are successful.

The representatives of Home and School presented the board with a list of improvements which they feel would help rectify the problem.

Recommendations include the in-because she thought they were too expensive. Jean Anthon stood up in defense and said, "These kids shouldn't suffer because they live in a tourism area. Quality of education and facilities shouldn't be lacking because they lack the populace."

Communication between the taxpayers and government agencies is important, Ladurantaye stresses. "Provincially, you don't see where you're money goes, and it's really frustrating. Tax-paid services are more obvious at a local level. We need to find out what those guys are doing with our tax dollars."

Because of increasing problems with growing enrollment and lack of accommodation, the goals for members of the accommodation committees have changed over the years. "Enrollment growth has taken everybody by surprise. It's still increasing, and will continue to grow for awhile."

The committee has gone from looking at short term accommodation, such as portables, to more long term places like the former Dollo's IGA store in Minden which has been housing primary students from Archie Stouffer Elementary School.

A major problem faced by the committee is the temporary zoning and lease of this primary school. The building's three-year lease expires before the county will be considered for more funding.

"Space has become more critical—our schools are overcrowded," says Ladurantaye. "But we need quality space. And I'm not convinced that portables are a good way of spending the taxpayers' money."

A portable costs about $25,000 and lasts for 10 years, she says. They are uncomfortable, with insufficient temperature regulators, and no washroom facilities. "In the winter kids get colds all the time because they don't put their coats on to run 40 feet to the school to go to the bathroom."

They also don't last through extreme weather conditions in the county. "Portables are just no good for this area."

The board must also consider "pod portables," groups of four portables with washroom facilities and a breezeway connecting them. "They're like tiny mini-schools clumped together," says Ladurantaye.

But most don't like portables. Unfortunately, it's difficult to look at long term accommodation when funding for the next three years has been rejected. And so, the lobby group is formed.

"Now we're in a quandary. We'll have to put together a stronger report, give the ministry more information. That information is more critical now."

"I still want to see more permanent schools. It's frustrating. This province is so rich. We have so much, yet we can't build proper facilities."

"Years ago schools were the best constructed buildings in a community. Now we're sticking our children in portables. I find that disturbing. Emphasis is not on the future anymore, and I feel that's so important."

After hearing about the government's decision against providing funding to the county, one person approached Ladurantaye with a suggestion for accommodation.

"She said, 'why don't you ask the service groups to help and build the schools yourself?' I thought that was a great idea. But we would be a bit hesitant. We might be perceived as putting our hand out again. We've already received money from the community through taxation."

"It would have to be a community effort. We're working together, not against each other. Maybe it could be done bit by bit, like 'buy a brick for the school.' Then we could say to heck with the stupid government. The support is out there if we need it."

Digging deep!

Board of Education chairman Wendy Ladurantaye takes over the controls of a backhoe to officially break the ground for an addition and renovations at the Halibur-ton high school. The $1.1-million project will add a new library resource centre, a new classroom, and create better storage and office space. Work continues till fall.

Kushog holds annual meeting

by ANNE HEWITT

Staff Reporter

The chairperson of the Kushog Lake environment committee, Marie Thomson, was pleased to report that the spraying for forest tent caterpillars was a success.

"The spraying was carried out in the morning of Tuesday, June 6, beginning at the north end and working south," she told a group of residents at the property owners association's annual general meeting. "I believe there were close to 200 property owners participating, although I understand some forms (indicating that spraying was wanted) were received too late for them to be included."

However, the spraying did not go off without a hitch. On the first mailing telling people about the proposal she included the wrong phone number to contact for information, and had to correct them by hand. In the second mailing, another contact number was given and it too was wrong.

"Somewhere in California there is someone wondering why they were getting phone calls from Canada asking about spraying for caterpillars," she said.

Thomson also reported that a committee had been set up to do lake pollution testing throughout the summer. Water clarity, Chlorophyll A and B will be tested, and the results will be made available. As well, the Ministry of the Environment will be

Self-esteem fights drugs

tion and treatment of drug abuse. "We have to stop looking at the government for help, and start looking at community action that doesn't need big bucks."

Cathy Campbell, who works at the Toronto East General Detoxification Centre, attended the meeting and agreed that self-esteem is needed to combat the drug problem, but was disappointed that no further funding is being provided for treatment centres.

"He said a lot of good things about the political issues, but when the question of money came up I think he was wrong. There's a lot more money needed to make help available to people."

Ms. Campbell told the Echo that treatment at a centre such as Bellwood in North Toronto is quite expensive. "Right now we're sending people to the United States for treatment. The average person just can't afford to go to one of the bigger clinics for help."

Editorials

'Full of sound and fury, signifying nothing...'

Outwardly, and viewed in isolation, it didn't amount to very much. A former leader of the Nazi Party of Canada, 80 or so 'skinheads' bussed up from the city, raucous music, foul language, a few taunts and witless replies. A clutch of media types awaited a confrontation that never came, while a trickle of the curious drove slowly by, until police routed traffic down another road. When darkness came a cross was burned and cries of 'white power' and 'siege heil' echoed through the night. A few local people protested quietly at a gathering on main street, singing songs and affirming the primacy of tolerance and love. Others joined a demonstration of B'Nai Brith holocaust survivors, people who experienced the horror of racial hatred and Nazi power, and could put John Beattie's gathering in profounder context than could those who know the history of Nazi atrocity but not its reality.

By Sunday, it was all over. The skinheads departed, the holocaust survivors packed up their placards and boarded their buses, and the reporters rushed off to file their stories. The rally came and went without serious incident, and the community, it appeared, was not much tarnished by the experience.

If those were the outward circumstances, what was the inward significance of the rally, and of the community's response to it? Was the gathering, with its white supremacist, neo-Nazi rhetoric, mere sound and fury, signifying nothing, or was there reason to be disquieted, angered, even outraged by the weekend's events?

Clearly the community felt there was. From the moment the first news of the impending gathering on John Beattie's rented property reached local citizens, opposition mounted. People were offended that racist philosophies might be expressed in their community, and feared the community might be seen as somehow condoning such attitudes. Some responded by writing letters to the editors of local papers. Others organized a counter-rally, or circulated posters affirming the community's contempt for racist doctrine. Still others expressed their dismay by ignoring the rally entirely, choosing not to give it legitimacy by confrontation.

Some people might have wished that plans for the rally had never been publicized, and indeed, the issue of what and how to report was debated among Echo staff, as no doubt it was elsewhere. Fringe groups — radicals who see a conspiracy where none exists, or who perceive great injustice where none has been done — crave public attention, and the media have the facilities to give it to them. But ignoring racism and hatred are not the best means of negating it, and reporting plans for the rally, and the circumstances surrounding it, gives credence to the voices of opposition. The counterpoint of a holocaust survivor's reaction is more damaging to neo-Nazi radicals than pretending they don't exist could ever be.

To view the weekend rally as an inconsequential, if reprehensible, little gathering of misguided young people, would be to miss the sinister dimension of the event. Its purpose was not merely to espouse racist, irreligious ideas. Its purpose was the exercise of power, and the manipulation of confused, ill-informed individuals. People who associate with racist groups have little sense of who they are, and of how to find their own place in society. Instead, they hide their insecurity in the clamour of a mob, and find in it the identity that has otherwise eluded them. Such groups are dangerous because they can be manipulated by people who crave power, and who see an opportunity to disseminate their doctrines by planting seeds of hatred and disaffection in impressionable minds.

There is little chance that the racists of this world can ever be persuaded to change their minds. Their significance increases, however, when they poison the minds of others. And that is what the weekend's rally, and the community's forceful, deeply felt and articulately expressed response to it, were all about.

Beattie's landlord defends position

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our readers write...

To the Editor:

As the owner of the house where John Beattie held his rally, I want people to know that the landlord's rights are very limited. The renter becomes almost the same as the owner. As long as they look after the place and pay the rent, they can do as they want.

Mr. Beattie and his family were excellent tenants. They seemed like very nice people and were fitting into the community. Like everyone else, I knew nothing of his past and was shocked when this came to light. I went immediately to Mr. Beattie, then to the O.P.P. office, some of Minden council and also to my lawyer. I was told there was nothing I could do under the new Charter of Rights and Freedoms. I was assured by Mr. Beattie that this was a small gathering of friends. But at 3:00 PM on Saturday afternoon I travelled up the road past the house and was horrified at what I saw. Later, at about 10PM, my wife went over with friends for a drive and saw a cross being burnt. She then phoned me and I went down. I was there and watched what when on for two hours.

I understand some people in town are blaming me for what happened. To this I say 'nuts'. What about the bus company, should they have not brought up the bus? Should local stores not sell them food? Should Hydro shut off power? Should beer and liquor stores not sell products? Should Bell telephone take their phone out so this couldn't be arranged? Should local garages not sell gas? What I am saying is—regardless of what you think, you can't discriminate. So don't put all the blame on my family.

We have lived here all our lives and have contributed to this community as much as any other family and believe in freedom for everyone. I will be talking to my lawyer early in the week and will check out my legal options. I will personally guarantee there will never be a similar rally on any property I own again (it will be put in the lease). I hope we have all learned something from this and build a bigger and better community in which all people can live together in harmony regardless of race, colour, creed or religion.

We would like to thank all those who understand our position as a landlord, the O.P.P. for patroling the property, Russ Duhaime of the Minden Times and Martha Perkins of the Haliburton County Echo for fair journalism.

Thank you.

Congratulations

To the Editor:

I write to congratulate everyone associated with The Echo on the occasion of your publication being judged the best community newspaper in Canada in its circulation category.

Your efforts over the years have been recognized by the Canadian Community Newspapers Association and so it is most fitting and deserving that you receive this latest award.

I have always appreciated the dedication and commitment that you and your staff bring to your task.

The Echo continues to provide readers with one excellent issue after another and I wish you continued success.

Yours sincerely,

Hit in the dumps

To the Editor:

Once again the lowly tax payer gets hit, with in my estimation more unfair legislation.

I am referring to the new hours at the Guilford Land Fill Site. Our municipal politicians have in their great wisdom set out new hours that, for the average working stiff, makes it very difficult to dispose of our refuse.

The site is open Tues., Wed. and Thurs. from 12 PM—2 PM and Mon. and Fri. from 8 AM—6 PM. The hours when the majority of us are either at work or travelling to and from. With the dumpster going and these hours, it leaves many of us in a position of either buying additional containers or arranging garbage pick up, or better yet carrying the garbage in the trunk all day in order to get to the Haliburton Dump after work hours. Did no one think that maybe rather than 12 PM—2 PM, 7 AM—9 AM or 5 PM—7 PM would be feasible?

It would appear to me that after a 14 percent tax

IF YOU TAKE a look at the calendar you will find that we are right in the middle of the first week of summer and I often think that we can consider ourselves very lucky to be living here in the heart of vacation land. The summer can be a very happy time of the year. It's that time of the year when everything seems to come alive, business places are busier than usual, most people seem to have a smile on their face and everyone seems to be working, especially this year when the Help Wanted columns in the paper seem to get longer each week. Oh yes, we agree, that there's the odd person who comes into the area with the idea of making it difficult for the people working in stores who have to wait on them. These same people are hard to satisfy no matter where they go and they seem to make it a practice of continually complaining about this or about that and that the food in the local restaurants or other eating establishments never seems to suit them. They are complaining about prices and they complain about service. Thank goodness these complainers make up a small minority of our summer visitors. Some people say that the summer months are nothing but a pain in the neck due to the fact that they have to line up at the check out counters, line-up to purchase tickets to an entertainment event or they are upset when they can't find a parking space on the main street. You have to face these same problems if you go to other towns or cities and we don't seem to mind this inconvenience if we are away but we just don't seem to want to tolerate these same problems here in the Highlands of Haliburton. So this summer leave your worries at home and come on up and visit us and we hope that you will have the best summer ever.

Here's this week's business report for Haliburton. The foundation is in and the new building for Roberts-Austin Fuels in the Industrial Park will soon be completed. Kozy Korner Take-Out Service beside Country Rose and Shrub (formerly the Driftwood Restaurant) is now open. Cordell Interiors who recently purchased Elstone Motor Sales building on the main street, started to put an addition on the front of the building last week. Mingle's is the name of the new frozen yogurt business which opened last week next to Perfect Prints. Diane's Sewing Center is the newest business in Stedmans Mall.

The Haliburton Fire Department was called out last Thursday to extinguish a fire in the pine trees behind John Miller's home at the corner of Pine Avenue and Park Street in Haliburton.

According to the latest issue of Inside Hockey, Bernie Nicholls established an unofficial record largest single-season increase in points this season. Nicholls earned 150 points in 1988-89, 72 more than last year's 78 point production. That jump exceeded Guy Lafleur's 63-point leap from 56 in 1973-74 to 119 in 1974-75. That Nicholls played more games this year—79 than last—65 is part of the reason for his improvement. Last year he averaged 1.2 points per game. This year he averaged 1.9. The Los Angeles center's improvement is better than any other in league history made by players who appeared in at least 80 percent of their teams games in consecutive seasons. They NHL does not keep records on the subject but The Hockey News does. Players considered this year were those who played in at least 64 games in 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Best of luck to Rolly LeTourneau in the coming year as he takes over as president of the Rotary Club of Haliburton. Rolly stepped into the drivers seat last Thursday evening at the club's year end meeting held at Wig-A-Mog Inn.

CHACE Place is back. After the recent fire the Haliburton Resource Centre has re-opened at a temporary location, at the Dysart Community Centre in Haliburton effective July, 1989. The Resource Centre is free for all families to enjoy. Newborns to nine year olds can take advantage of a wonderful selection of toys and activities.

The great one was in town last Thursday. Yes that's right, hockey super star Wayne Gretzky dropped into Haliburton for lunch and a round of golf at the PineStone Inn and Country Club. It's not everyday that a celebrity like Wayne Gretzky pays us a visit.

The Highland Games Committee is holding a meeting for volunteers at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall in Haliburton to-night (Wednesday, July 5) at 7:45 PM.

On a recent Sunday afternoon I had the opportunity to drop into the Old General Store at Donald and met the new owners, Mr. and Mrs. Vern Grady who moved here from Oshawa, Ontario. You would never know the old building now as the new owners have done a super job of renovating it into a beautiful home at one end and a Dairy Bar at the other end. The new business is known as the Dairy Bar in Donald.

A last minute reminder that the Blood Donor Clinic will be held at the Legion Hall in Haliburton on Tuesday, July 11 from 2:00 to 8:00 PM.

Creating an untrue view of the world

AS OTHERS SEE IT

Bob Giuliano

SOME YEARS AGO I stopped reading the daily newspaper and watching the evening news on T.V. I was convinced that the newspaper and radio/T.V. reporting was bad propaganda that I didn't read a headline or belly-up for Barbara for five years. I didn't miss it at all. Friends remarked that I seemed as well informed as they were who wasted hours each day keeping up with world reports. It's not that I was smart. Rather, the reporting of so called news does not inform anyone. It is merely a matter of entertainment.

That's what hooked me on The Echo. The Echo was about people and human life. I was better informed after reading it. The big city dailies were like reading the index to a book. It gives you a hint about what's happening in the book, but nothing more.

On Canada Day in Minden I was more deeply convinced that the media, especially the T.V. medium has grown more irresponsible in their reporting. While the Highlands community gathered to declare their global consciousness, their conviction that all human beings are equal and mutual, the several cameras and reporters present hummed away in a rather dull interest. However, the presence of one young racist turned the eyes of the media to the bigoted sensationalism of his prater.

Suddenly, the focus had shifted from the humane to the "man bites dog" syndrome. Clustered around racism, reporters and cameras eagerly consumed the bizarre, the madness, the inhumans. Only one reporter refused to be drawn into the excitement of rage and violence: Martha Perkins of The Echo.

Ethics not priority among the press

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

Martha Perkins

MUCH TO THE CHAGRIN of most media personnel—and almost in spite of their every effort—there was no violence at John Beattie's skinhead rally on the weekend. The real news, therefore, is why the assembly of television, print and radio reporters did not get the confrontation scenes they so obviously desired.

I had the dubious pleasure of spending most of my weekend standing in front of Beattie's house, listening to music and language I hope I never have to subject myself to again. I also had to watch the behaviour of my peers as they stooped almost as low as those people whose beliefs provoked such righteous indignation. There was much to learn about hypocrisy and the sin of chasing false idols on the Bobcaygeon Road this weekend.

Let me set the scene for you. On Saturday, I ar-angered by her own industry, stepped away and responded with the integrity of her person and her profession. That is responsible, balanced accountability to her community.

I approached several news teams and asked about their behaviour. "Why," I asked, "are you drawn to that young man's bigotry? Why so much focus and footage of the fear-ridden?" I received many responses. The worst was, "I'm just following orders, doing my job. I don't make decisions. I just do what I'm told." Another said, as though I was a small town bo-hunk and didn't understand where things are at, "This is to feed the hunger of sensationalism in the city." very revealing, it seems, of the dead souls of urban creatives who must be fed fear and hate in order to feel alive.

Another team of camera people responded with understanding and appreciation of my questions. They seemed to have given some thought to the place of the media in shaping modern consciousness. They talked about the editing process that would follow, the concern for balanced reporting and at the same time recognized with me that the news must sell itself. Fear and anger sells news which sells a station which sells advertising. All of which shapes human attitudes toward life, the city and one another. I appreciated those who at least were thoughtful and felt some responsibility for the profound impact that T.V. has on the human spirit today.

Nevertheless, when all was said and done, I came away feeling very sad that the media creates a way of seeing the World that is simply untrue and unrepresentative of reality as we experience it day by day. What a terrible tragedy that is. Propaganda in the worst sense of that word is the result of so-called "freedom of the press." there is little difference between the deliberate control of the media in China and the unconscious control of it in Canada by irresponsible commercial competition.

So I'm back to skipping the daily news hype and its resplendent ads. I know more about what's happening in the World by listening to my neighbours and my own heart.

rived at the Village Green shortly before the community rally was to begin. Only two people were there but soon, more locals began to trickle in. Rev. Ed Moll played his guitar, Sheila Ziman thanked everyone for their support and if the events had been allowed to unfold by themselves, the media would have seen the fellowship which can bind a community together.

This wasn't to be. A white supremacist and two skinheads jumped out of the back of a truck and as soon as the media saw them, backs were turned on the locals and all cameras and microphones were trained on these representatives of hatred. Wondering what all the fuss was about, I walked over and in a few seconds heard too much: The white supremacist—whom one woman described as "but such a nice looking young man"—was calmly talking about how immigrants (non-whites) were stealing jobs away from Canadians etc., etc. The cameras were lapping it up.

So that evening, how many people said to themselves "He's such a nice looking young fellow, he can't be all that bad. And he doesn't call the blacks dirty names or anything like that so he can't really be a racist. Now that I think of it, wasn't our John-

Pic of the Past

This week's photo takes us back to the early 1930's when the main street of Haliburton was still unpaved. Many of our senior citizens will remember G.P. Hart's General Store on left. This business was purchased by Henry Brohm and today is Brohm's Variety. You will recognize Bernsteins and the Kozy Korner, beyond which stood Curry's Shell Station. A Fire Chief gas sign stands in front of another garage on the right. It was not until 1937 that a by-law was passed prohibiting cows from running at large on the streets. Fun and profit in cottage country

DOWN OUR ROAD

Sharon Lynch

IT WAS AN enterprising family, of that there could be no doubt. A large one, the children were brought up to take the initiative and use their imagination. Years later she would shake her head at some of the escapades they had got into when they were too young to know the meaning of embarrassment or failure. Which is how it should be. And being a group of young freeenterprisers, they were always looking for ways to make a buck.

Summers afforded wonderful opportunities. They were several reasons for this. First, the fact that they were six children, four sisters and two cousins, with an age spread of about eight years. This made them a pretty cohesive group. Then there was the location of their cottages. Smack dab on a portage route, on the same lake as a large summer camp and right in the middle of their parents' cabin rental business. All this added up to many potential customers for their goods and services.

They played it to the hilt. Let's take the advantages of the portage route as an example. For as long as the oldest could remember, summer meant looking out into the bay and seeing a line of canoes head-

Extracting our hospital funds

Harvey Clarke

AS WE ALL READ on the front page of last week's Echo, the saga of the Haliburton Hospital's Continuing Care Unit continues. Jerry Strickland wrote a letter to Premier Peterson, and got an evasive answer.

When you work your way through all the bureaucratic baffle, it seems that, while they may not be actually reneging on the promise of funds, they are in fact continuing to delay the approvals in the hopes that the costs will continue to escalate until the community will no longer be able to afford their share.

At which point they can throw up their hands, and say "well, if you can't afford to pay your share, then we'll just have to forget it."

I wonder if Gordon Ashworth composed the letter to Mr. Strickland for Mr. Peterson's signature. That's not out of the question if it was written a week or two ago. The Premier seems to be questioning his judgment on other matters, so maybe we should just write back and query this point.

The one thing we shouldn't do is just lay back and let these people renege on a deal after the community, its citizens and politicians have put up our share of the money — not just once when the bill was $1.2 million, but again when it had ballooned to $4.3 million.

Shouldn't we put together some of the same kind of community effort into getting this government to keep its word to us — even if they can't keep it for anyone else...

Perhaps we might dig out a copy of the ad that ran during the last election campaign that showed John Eakins' smiling face, and said: "When Haliburton wanted a hospital — John delivered."

Let's turn it into a 10 x 20 foot billboard, and put it up at this end of the hospital helicopter pad on County Road One.

People used to send telegrams to protest such infamous government actions, but we don't even have a telegraph office anymore. These days, the big thing is the FAX machine. We could start a campaign, where each of us takes a turn faxing a copy of the ad — and the heading from any one of a dozen stories and editorials about the costs and delays — to Queen's Park.

Keep in mind, however, that because there are a few problems in the house at this point, the Premier is planning to cut all legislation short and close the legislature down for the summer, in the hopes things will blow over.

This means we may find our John up in this part of the world. Maybe we should develop a "truth squad" — all dressed in white hospital garb — to picket his visits around the riding, promising goodies to all, while we await our funds. Or maybe we

The price we pay for democracy

NORTHERN LIGHTS

Virginia Muenzel

WE'VE ALL just celebrated Canada Day or The Fourth of July, or, in our case, both. Aren't you glad we live in a democracy? The greatest thing about democracies is that they contain within their charters, constitutions, or what have you, some rights and/or freedoms for all their citizens, (so long as they obey the law of the land.)

Another great thing about our democracies, Canada's and the United States', is that they were formed and defended by hundreds of various peoples, mostly from far less free parts of the world. Many of them came here fleeing for their very lives. People still come to North America seeking safety, because they made the mistake of saying what they thought in a country that casually kills people for that error. Other groups of people come because their colour or religious beliefs have put them in jeopardy. Our democracies, by definition, welcome all with open arms. And also give each newcomer the same rights and freedoms, (so long as they obey the law of the land.)

This can get tricky, if we think about it, because it means we must also be tolerant. And each of us has a point of issue or a nightmare memory that makes tolerance a little hard to swallow.

I personally had a great deal of trouble dealing with the Iranian crisis. At that time, we lived only a couple of miles from the University of Buffalo campus. I sometimes worked in the same area, and what I saw angered and frightened me.

Americans were being arrested or kidnapped in Iran. They were tortured or executed as 'spies.' Some of them had dared to say or write something negative about the Iranian government's way of doing things.

At the same time all this was occurring, there were several hundred Iranian students attending U.B. on special visas, (at the expense of the U.S. government, by the way). That, in itself, didn't bother me. But what made me want to scream was the fact that these very same students, while being fed, housed, and taught by the democracy I lived in, were parading daily around the campus, carrying placards saying, "Death to the American hostages." One person actually had the audacity to stand on the street of my free country with the traditional, "Yankee Go Home" sign.

It made a lot of people mad. Trouble is, the Americans who got so angry they attacked the group, ended up in jail. Because, according to the U.S. Bill of Rights, the Iranians were residing in a democracy which gave them freedom of speech. And as long as they obeyed the law of the land, they could say whatever they chose. Fortunately, their visas soon ran out. Our democracy didn't say we had to renew them, so we got to ship them all back home.

Point is, it was all pretty hard for us to swallow. But had we been allowed to attack them, torture or execute them for publicly debasing us, then our democracy would have been a hypocritical failure. The same applies in Canada. We still have a lot to learn about inequities. But the Charter of Rights doesn't say, "Except for" native North Americans, or Iranians, or Armenians, or Russians, or blacks, or orientals, or Jews, or Americans, or Neo-nazis, or anybody else.

And, sometimes, when certain groups or individuals take our Charter of Rights and use its freedoms in order to propagate hate or discrimination against any of the rest of us, we have a hard time dealing with their behaviour.

We each have to find our own way, (within the law) to let these persons know that we are aware that they have the right to state their beliefs, however pathetic. But we do not intend, under any circumstances, to give them their way. This a free country, for them, as well as for those groups they would like to destroy. But only so long as they obey the law of the land. And the law of this land does not believe 'God is racist.'

Something goes boom in the night

OFF THE RECORD

Susan Grober

A SLIVER OF lightning pierces the humid night sky, flashes a slash of bright light, then fades to black. Then, BOOM! rolling thunder crashes, reverberating over the hills. Huge rain drops sprinkle the earth and splatter the leaves of trees which sway in the whirling wind.

I love thunderstorms, especially at the cottage. Looking out my picture window with the lights turned low, the whole living room brightens up when a sheet of lightning strikes over the lake.

While the sound of rain pounding on the roof is comforting, a violent crash of thunder can send shivers up my spine.

Thunderstorms usually come late on a hot summer afternoon, and are a great way of releasing pressure.

Pressure mounts as the hours pass. Hot, moist air rises, cools off by expansion, and water vapour is condensed, forming a cumulus cloud. If the process continues violently, the cloud becomes immense, and the top spreads out in the shape of an anvil as the transition to a cumulonimbus cloud occurs (okay, so I looked it up).

Turbulent air currents within the cloud cause a continual breaking up and reuniting of the raindrops, building up strong electrical charges that result in lightning (trust me, it was in the Concise Columbia Encyclopedia).

Thunder is the sound produced when a flash of lightning passes through the air, heating the adjacent air and causing it to rapidly expand. A short flash of lightning creates a short crash of thunder. Rolling thunder occurs with a long flash of lightning, generating thunder over a great distance or echoing over obstructions such as clouds, mountains or layers of air.

Everyone has their own idea of where to run for cover when lightning strikes. Some insist upon standing under trees, but experts say lightning will hit the highest points.

There are also some adults who are terrified of thunder and lightning, and will hide under the bed until a storm passes.

But after the storm comes a certain calm. Pressure in the atmosphere reduces, and the air seems moist, yet clear and crisp.

A dose of thunder is almost like the atmosphere's answer to having a good cry or a rip-roaring temper tantrum. And with the sultry summer weather we're having, I hope it's thunderstorm season again

SPORTS

Nicholls has career in mind

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

If athletic talent runs in families, then 19-year-old Erin Nicholls is living proof.

The young athlete has just finished Grade 12 at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, and will be going to Birchmount Collegiate in Toronto next year. Nicholls will be attending classes part-time, and the rest of the day will be spent in hockey training.

After one year at Birchmount, Nicholls is eligible to go to university in the United States, and is hoping to get a hockey scholarship, possibly to Michigan State.

"The hockey in the States is just as good as in the Ontario Hockey League, plus you get the education," he says. "And there are always National Hockey League scouts there. A lot of players are coming out of the college ranks now."

While the games he plays in the next few years may be the most important in his life, Nicholls says the idea of being drafted is a bit overwhelming, but it doesn't really make him nervous.

"If you are really into the game you don't notice that the scouts are there," he says. "And sometimes you work harder when you know they're there—you don't want to make any mistakes. You feel good that they are looking at you, that they want you."

Being part of a true hockey family (his older brother Bernie plays with the L.A. Kings), Nicholls grew up with the sport, and says he really began enjoying it when his older brothers started playing.

He worked his way up through the local hockey association, and when he was 16 he was drafted to the OHL. However, once you play with the league you are no longer eligible to play in the States, so Nicholls turned down the offer.

The decision took a lot of thought, and there have been times when Nicholls looked back and thought he may have made the wrong decision. Now that he has decided to go to Toronto for a year he is relieved.

"There has been so much pressure to decide," he says. "But I gave it a lot of thought, and I want to give it a shot. Now I can say I'm going away. I finally got my mind made up."

All winter, when he's not out on the rink, the television is on, and Nicholls is glued to the set, watching the NHL games, and picking up some tips from the players' moves.

"I love to watch hockey, but I always try to learn from it as well," he says. "I don't think boys now watch enough games on TV. You can see what the players do and practice it yourself."

However, he does not condone all the moves he sees during the game, and says something has to be done to end the violence—high sticking, and slashing.

"High sticks are getting worse and I don't like that," he says. "Roughness is a part of the game, and a lot of fans like to see that, but violence—no one likes watching that."

While hockey may seem to be his passion, Nicholls is also an avid baseball player, and had there been more organized ball in the area, he might have considered a career in the major leagues.

This is his third season with the Haliburton Warriors, and Nicholls has gained the reputation of being one of the best players on the team.

The team plays to win, but Nicholls admits that because most of the guys have been playing together for the past few years, the games are always a social event.

"We are really close, and we always have a lot of laughs now," he says. "And we're more relaxed and used to the league. The first year we couldn't get on to the pitch. Now we can beat any team in the league."

In hopes of "getting some bigger arms" Nicholls is going to spend the summer laying cement, before heading to school in August. He will also do some training on his own—lifting weights, jogging, and riding a bike—for one or two hours every night. While it may cut into his free-time, he says he doesn't mind.

"If you're not into it then you have to concentrate," he says. "But if you think about what training is going to do for you then it's easy. When you play all winter it's tiring, and you have to be ready for it. You have to work hard and train hard."

While his friends and family may be sad to see him go next year, they all want what is best for him, and if all continues to go well, the next time they see him he'll be on his way to the States.

'There has been so much pressure to decide,' says Erin Nicholls as he ponders his future. 'But I gave it a lot of thought and I want to give Toronto a shot. Now I can say I'm going away. I finally got my mind made up.'

Junior/Senior soccer match provides both teams good workout

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The rest of the league may have been on holidays, but there was no rest for the Haliburton Soccer Club, as the juniors met the seniors in an exhibition game on Wednesday.

Although the game did not count in regular league action, it did provide a valuable learning opportunity for both teams. What was originally going to be two separate practices, was turned into a game, and despite a 7-2 loss to the seniors, both teams were winners.

"It provided both teams with a chance to work on passing and technical play," says Brian Moore, manager of the senior team. "It keeps both teams sharp."

The game was such a success that Moore says they are planning on having another exhibition game on Wednesday.

"Nothing can beat a game situation," he says. "If you just kick the ball around you don't worry about throw ins, or feeding the defender. It forces us to work on our passes and we don't get that chance a lot of the time. It also makes the juniors work harder."

The league had cancelled all play because of the long weekend, and regular games will resume this Sunday. The junior team meets Orillia Inter at 12:30 p.m. and the seniors take on Orillia City at 2:30 p.m. Both games will be played on the field behind Archie Stouffer Elementary School.

Guilford women finally win two

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The West Guilford women's softball team has ended its losing streak with 9-3 and 10-9 wins over the Minden team last week.

The away game on Tuesday proved an easy victory for West Guilford, which has been having difficulty bringing home runs in the last few games. The team jumped to an early 4-1 lead in the first inning, and the second inning was blanked.

After loss, Warriors come back to life, win 10-4

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton Warriors lost a close 9-7 game against the Minden Hustlers on Tuesday, but came back to life to take Thursday's game 10-4.

Haliburton started off in the lead on Tuesday's home game, with a home run by Erin Nicholls in the first inning, which brought home two runs. The second inning was blanked, and by the end of the third, Haliburton had a comfortable 6-4 lead.

Tran LaRue hit a solo home run in the fourth inning for Haliburton, and the offence kept Minden from scoring.

However, the Minden batters came alive in the last innings of the game. Barry Shaw had a two run home run in the fifth, and Dwight Sisson brought home three runs with a home run in the seventh, taking them into the lead, and giving them the game 9-7.

In what looked like a continuation of Tuesday's game, Minden jumped to an early 4-1 lead in the first innings of Thursday's game.

Haliburton held off the Minden batters for the last part of the game, and rallied in the last two innings to win the game. Andrew Burke hit a solo home run for Haliburton, and Brian Shaw had one for Minden.

Coach Bob MacNaull described the game as a "complete reversal" of Tuesday's match, with Haliburton's pitching and batting holding up, while Minden's fell behind.

Both teams scored one run in the third, but West Guilford took off again bringing in two runs in both the fourth and fifth innings. One runner scored for Minden in the fourth, but it wasn't enough to knock West Guilford off stride.

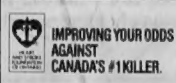

The home game on Thursday proved a little more difficult. Minden started off the game with a 2-0 lead, and by the end of the third inning they were ahead 5-1.

However, Minden's wide lead startled West Guilford into action, and they brought in four runs in the fourth, to tie up the game 5-5.

Minden brought in one runner in each of the next three innings, but West Guilford had another power inning in the sixth, with five batters crossing home plate to give West Guilford a close win.

"We're definitely playing better than we have been," says Joan Scott, coach of the West Guilford team. "Our defensive play has improved. Everything seemed to come together all of a sudden."

BUSINESS NEWS

'Baking has been a family thing for years,' say Ruth DeJong, seen here with husband Wayne. The couple recently opened Rachel's Home Bakery, featuring sticky chelsea buns and danishes, sinfully good brownies and six different kinds of cookies.

Get them while they're hot: Shelves empty quickly at Rachel's Home Bakery

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

THE AROMA of freshly baked bread and pastries makes your mouth water and your eyes bulge at the sight of rack upon rack of tempting tarts and scrumptious sweets at Rachel's Home Bakery in Haliburton.

But make sure you get there early, because the racks don't stay full for long. A steady stream of customers has been snatching up the freshly baked goodies from Wayne and Ruth DeJong's new business, almost before the baking has time to cool.

Each day, Mr. DeJong heads into work long before the sun rises and will spend the next twelve hours turning flour and yeast into baked goods. Dough is mixed (from scratch), buns are rolled, and tarts are filled before the store opens in the morning. Because it is a new business, quantity is a matter of guesswork.

"It is hard to know how much to make," says Mrs. DeJong. "We go by guesses and hope we come close to the right amount."

"So far we've been lucky," adds her husband. "We've been pretty well sold out every evening. Anything that is left over we donate to Extendercare because we like to have things fresh everyday."

From the counter you can see the huge oven used for baking. The size of a small bedroom, it contains six rotating shelves, capable of holding 178 loaves of bread, or 36 pans of buns. The other equipment in the bakery deals with equally large quantities. A mixer will knead 130 loaves of bread at once, and butter tarts are made in batches upwards of eight dozen.

However, for the most part Mr. DeJong is still working alone (he has a retired baker come up and help him on the weekends), and even with the equipment it is difficult to keep up.

"Everything is going over well, and we are busier than we expected to be," he says. "It's a heck of a job keeping that oven going. Two guys can fill it a lot better."

The DeJongs offer a wide range of products to satisfy every customer. Different kinds of bread, including whole wheat, line one wall, and a basket of french sticks sits on the counter. Inside the glass cases are an assortment of rolls—hot dog buns, kaisers, whole wheat, and sesame to name a few. There are also six different kinds of cookies, danishes, chelsea buns dripping with gooey syrup, muffins, brownies, and Mr. DeJong's specialty—cinnamon buns, loaded with raisins.

"For one guy my variety is not bad," he says. "As we get used to the business, more products will come out." However, his wife is careful to add that one person can only do so much, and time does play an important factor. "He can only make as much as he has time for," she says. "You can't necessarily make enough to last us until closing."

While Haliburton may be new to them, the business isn't—Mr. DeJong practically grew up in a bakery. His father owned a bakery in Port Perry, which Mr. DeJong later bought and operated for seven years.

"Baking has been a family thing for years," says Mrs. DeJong. "Wayne started out sweeping the floor in his father's bakery, and gradually moved into baking."

Last Thanksgiving weekend, the couple decided they would definitely be moving to Haliburton to open the business. They sold the bakery in Port Perry to Mr. DeJong's brother, and together with their two children (the bakery is named after their nine-year-old daughter), they moved here and started preparations.

Diane's to sew up business

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

WITH THE GRAND OPENING of Diane's Sewing Centre, Mel and Diane Blanchard are hoping to hem in some of the retail business in Haliburton.

The store, located on the lower floor of Stedman's Mall, offers everything you could possibly need to create anything from a stunning outfit to a pair of curtains. Patterns, notions, and material are all on display, and Mr. Blanchard says they are trying to provide "big city choices and reasonable prices, in a small town location".

The final decision to go into business was made in April. The couple decided on a sewing store because they felt it was one area that was not adequately covered in Haliburton.

"We thought for a long time that this was something we wanted to do," says Mr. Blanchard. "We kicked the idea around for awhile and decided to do it."

"There is a need for it," adds Mrs. Blanchard. "I used to have to bring things up from the city, because I couldn't find what I wanted here."

At the moment selection is limited. Thread and zippers come in a spectrum of colours, but there are only a few dozen different patterns of material.

"We started out with the basics," says Mrs. Blanchard. "We told the manufacturer to give us what sold the best until we found out what people wanted—then we'll gradually build up our selection."

"The customers have been very helpful. I ask them what they would like in the store and they tell me, so I know what to get."

There is also a possibility that once they get on their feet they will branch out into other areas. Mrs. Blanchard is hoping to stock an assortment of craft materials, and they would like to rent instructional tapes which show "all sorts of little secrets on sewing".

"People who come up for the summer don't want to lug a sewing machine up with them," says Mr. Blanchard. "Or if they are making curtains and will only need a machine for a few days, they can rent one for a nominal fee."

Sewing has been a long time interest of Mrs. Blanchard's, who has been creating her own clothing since high school. However, because of a job that required a lot of travelling, it has been a few years since she has been able to practice her craft, and she says opening the store is "jumping in with both feet".

"Fabrics have changed so much in the last few years," she says. "It's something that I will have to learn about again. And neither of us has been in business for ourselves before, so it is like learning a whole new job."

The decision to take on a new job required a great

Special education review reveals areas to be changed

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Major problems facing those in special education such as teasing and labeling result from a lack of understanding and communication, says Haliburton County Board of Education superintendent Dale Robinson.

"There's a lot of stigma attached to those in special education, and there's a lot of teasing going on. We need to stress the purpose of special education in order to eliminate the teasing," Robinson said while —to provide assessment in order to identify the student's exceptional aspects;

—to provide an individual program according to the student's needs and placement;

—to assist the pupil to develop coping techniques and compensatory strategies best suited to his/her learning style;

—to assist the pupil to develop appropriate behaviors to deal with social and academic situations;

—to assist the pupil to become an independent learner, and —to promote social interaction and acceptance for each student.

"There's a lot of stigma attached to those in special education, and there's a lot of teasing going on. We need to stress the purpose of special education in order to eliminate the teasing."

presenting the board's review of special education last week.

The review was conducted over the past school year by Robinson and a steering committee comprised of teachers, principals, trustees and parents. The following areas of the board's special education program were targeted for review by three sub-committees: the goals, the impact on the entire educational system and the degree of satisfaction among parents, students, teachers, administrators and trustees.

Chaired by Debbie Wales, the goals committee advised that better communication between teachers, parents, students, administrators and schools be established to facilitate better learning.

The committee also recommended that programs in regular classes be modified for students with special needs, that steps be taken to assist all pupils to understand the purpose of special education and that regular programs go under review every two or three years.

The committee also reported that the board's goals are "inadequate for further development of special education in Haliburton County." The following are a few of the committee's 17 suggested goals:

—to address the social, emotional, physical and educational needs of all children and to ensure the availability of resources to assist all teachers in meeting these needs;

Robinson said the behavioral problems of some students can interfere with the learning of others. "We're finding more and more difficulties in figuring out how to deal with that."

When behavior problems are extreme, students are transferred to Kinark school. But "what do you do with the kids that don't suit Kinark?" he asked.

Of 260 students reviewed, 12 per cent were identified as having learning exceptionalities. Of those students, not more than 2 per cent would be considered to have behavioral problems. "But that number is growing among young people," Robinson pointed out.

"There are some kids who can become violent and are an actual threat to others in the classroom."

The impact committee, chaired by John Fitzgerald, recommends that the board consider establishing special behavioral classes for children "whose activities are so destructive that they severely interfere with the learning of the other students."

Another recommendation of this committee is that trustees and administrators consider a variety of classroom sizes when building new structures or refurbishing old ones. Typically, a few number of students are in special education classes. "We find having a small group in a big room wastes space," said Robinson.

This committee also asks that the board and administration consider "ongoing and constant communication with the general public through the popular media. A marketing type of strategy should be developed to keep the public informed, and educated about areas like special education."

The satisfaction committee had a number of suggestions to make the special education program more advantageous and effective for all involved. Chaired by Mary Hicks, the first recommendation is to improve communication among parents, students, educators, trustees and support staff. Another is to "educate teachers and students to appreciate individual differences and reduce discrimination."

Trustee Tim Casey agreed that communication is important, particularly between special education and regular classroom teachers. "Some teachers don't have a clue of what's going on in other classes. A regular classroom teacher can destroy a child, simply by not knowing what's going on."

The board might have to look at providing special education teachers with additional preparation time, said Robinson. "Some special education teachers have trouble contacting regular teachers. We might have to provide more time."

Some other recommendations are to:

—review current testing procedures;

—continue present programs and increase services for some exceptional children (eg. speech and language, gifted, behavior);

—provide opportunities for teachers to develop professionally and to keep in touch with current research and teaching strategies, and —continue to place qualified, dedicated, knowledgeable, compassionate, professional teachers in special education assignments.

"Kids in special education must establish a close relationship with their teacher," noted Robinson. "Trust is very important. We need to determine who can do the job, and who can do it effectively."

The board has also been asked to create the position of a special education co-ordinator/consultant for the county. Organization is beneficial, and a consultant would provide service, information and guidance for teachers, students and parents alike, said Robinson.

Another concern brought up during the review is that some community colleges may not provide special education opportunities for students with exceptionalities. But Robinson said many now are providing modified courses, so it is possible for these students to get a community college certificate.

Haliburton Highlands Secondary School teacher Marilyn Kuno attended the board meeting, and said many colleges and universities offer special education for students with learning exceptionalities through peer tutoring, tape recordings and oral exams. "So special education doesn't just stop at the end of high school."

Recommendations in the review should be looked at as a guideline for changes that are needed over a long term, said Robinson. And general understanding of special education has already changed considerably over the years.

"It's improving," assured Robinson. "I'm seeing a lot of regular classroom teachers making modifications in their courses and listening to the special education teachers."

"There's no known cure for (learning exceptionalities). These people carry a disability for life, and must learn to cope with it. But if you were missing an arm or leg, people would see that you have trouble."

"With a learning disability, if a person wanted to, they could hide it. Others see them as illiterate or poor workers. If someone can't write, others think he's just lazy. Through special education we hope these people learn to cope and admit to their problems."

"The future's getting brighter for these people, but it's still a struggle. And this is just the tip of the iceberg."

Clear trip policy still up in air as board approves next Quebec trip

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School's Grade 8 student field trip to Quebec City next April has received approval by the Haliburton County Board of Education.

Concerns over cost, safety and the necessity of field trips were brought up at the board's May meeting. A decision on the Quebec trip was held over until representatives from the school could make a presentation explaining the significance of the trip to trustees.

Trustees had to make their decision at the June meeting so the school could benefit by requesting a package deal early and get a discount. But discussion is far from over—trustees agreed to bring the topic up during a meeting after the summer, and will review board policy on field trips.

Attending last week's meeting were principal Doug Devolin and teachers Roy Hoare and Roy Scott to discuss the Quebec City Experience, a four-day trip which has been running for the past five years.

Addressing the board, Hoare said the trip provides an educational and cultural experience through media such as travel, sight-seeing, dance workshops and skits. Students visit museums, churches and battle sites. They also learn the language and social skills through communication with others. Even the bus trip is a learning experience. "It teaches the kids to meet schedules because they always have to be back at the bus on time."

"And it provides a lesson in being a minority. In Haliburton County you don't know what that is."

Devolin told the board that school staff have wrestled with problems of the Quebec trip, but the benefits have always superseded any doubts.

One of the major problems has been the cost. Devolin said students are warned not to "rush home and ask Mom and Dad for money. We've discussed how students can earn part of the money themselves to alleviate the burden on their parents."

"It is a big dollar," he said of the $340 cost, "but money doesn't seem to get in the way when people want to go." Fifty-four of the Grade 8 students attended this year's trip.

The school has experimented with student fundraising to help pay for the excursion but, says Devolin, these efforts were quashed by the students who preferred coming up with money on their own or from their parents.

"I don't think there's a perfect answer. We've not come up with any great solution. But I can't see us coming up with financing for 50 students."

"In my opinion, trips are worthwhile. But sometimes they'll compound on a family, and families don't like to admit they have money problems. I've known of teachers who have privately helped pay for a student."

When the matter was brought up later in the meeting, trustee Tim Casey commented that many families have trouble making ends meet, and peer pressure for students to go on trips is strong.

"You can talk all you want about borrowing funds and making money, but in Haliburton County the average income is less than other areas. How can you afford to go someplace with your whole family, much less afford trips like these?"

Board chairperson Wendy Ladurantaye said she would have difficulty cancelling the trip and turning down students who look forward to it. "I couldn't look at one of those kids and say, 'you can't go on the trip. It seems that if they want to go, they find a way.'"

Trustee Len Salvatori echoed this statement, and said young people should be provided with many opportunities in life. "They'll just spend the money they want to anyway," he said.

Social agency wants mental health clinic in area

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Now that the Peterborough Civic Hospital is unable to fund twice-monthly visits by a social worker, the need for a permanent mental health clinic in Haliburton County is even more acute, says the agency trying to make the Ministry of Health agree.

Last month, Peterborough Civic announced that "because of a budget-related cut in our social work hours," it could no longer afford to have Roma Rees visit Haliburton. Before this announcement, anyone referred to Ms. Rees, who has a Masters degree in social work, was placed on a two-to-three month waiting list—a sure indication she was providing a needed service. A psychiatrist will still make monthly visits to the area but will focus on assessment, not counselling.

In the meantime, the Haliburton Social Action Committee has drawn up a proposal which has been approved by the District Health Council and is now in the hands of Elinor Caplan, provincial minister of health. It calls for the establishment of a Haliburton County Counselling Centre which would meet the mental health needs of adults. A similar centre is operating in Bancroft.

One doesn't have to look very far back in the past to recall incidences which illustrate the need for such a centre. If one had been present in the community, the HSAC's Gena Robertson, says it might have achieved two goals: crisis prevention and if not, counselling for the other family members involved.

Crises can be a multitude of things—a death in the family, marital breakdown, prolonged unemployment, a disability. Robertson says there are times in everyone's life when "you need someone to talk to and your neighbour or sister isn't enough."

Living in the country lends itself to many problems, as well. Some families are isolated and have a lack of transportation, while others must cope with a lack of winter employment. There's also a high rate of alcoholism in the county.

Exacerbating this is the fact that to get counselling or treatment, people must go to Peterborough. This involves a loss of wages since appointments, sometimes weekly, are invariably between nine and five; either taking the children out of school or finding day care for preschoolers; gas money (if you have a car); parking; and food.

Besides that, more people would be willing to seek counselling if it was offered closer to home. "When you have a locally based service, it's usually used way more because it's accessible." Should a clinic be based in the county, Robertson predicts "it would be extremely well utilized."

Letters of support for the proposal seem to indicate this as well.

Dr. Don Mikel, medical officer for the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit: "There's no question a centre is needed and has been for years." He says follow-up is a weakness of the present system.

The Children's Aid Society: "We are severely handicapped when our clients must travel out of the county. Also, clients must wait for substantial periods of time before they reach the top of the waiting list." If the centre was to include marital and separation counselling, the CAS knows of 35 families which would benefit. As well, "because social assistance can so often erode a family's sense of strength and belonging in the community, the attendant deterioration in social and life skills may precipitate deep-seated problems with day care, housing, transportation, health, nutrition, addiction, debt, violence and court proceedings."

A needs assessment survey done by the HSAC in 1987 showed that one of the service gaps most frequently identified was the lack of a county based mental health service. Further inquiries reveal that the following agencies believe they could refer many people to the centre: CAS, 35; Kinark Child and Family Services, 20; Women's Safety Network, 30; Job Skills Training, 30; and County of Haliburton Social Services, 24.

The centre would hire a director/therapist, psychiatric social worker, mental health crisis worker, office manager and part-time medical secretary. (The North Hastings Counselling Centre has a similar staff makeup.)

Their objective would be:

To enable family members, teachers, social service workers, care givers and the general public to recognize the early signs and symptoms of mental health problems;

To enable people to recognize the accessibility and helpfulness of mental health services and refer appropriately;

To raise the awareness of promoting one's own mental well-being and the well-being of the community at large;

To provide individual and group therapy to assist individuals to function independently in their community and to prevent institutionalization;

To provide assessment and consultative service for professionals and individuals to ensure appropriate treatment plans are established within the community.

The HSAC would like more support from people in the community in convincing the ministry of health that such a centre truly is needed. People are asked to write Elinor Caplan M.P.P., Minister of Health, 10th Floor Hepburn Block, 80 Grosvenor Street, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 2C4.

deal of thought from the couple. Mr. Blanchard is still working in Mississauga as an inventory controller for Bell Canada, and he is commuting to Haliburton on the weekends. This leaves Mrs. Blanchard to hold things down at the store during the week. However, both agree that the so far running the store is the easy part, it was making the decision that was hard.

"We started talking dollars and figures to make sure we could do it, and it was a relief once we decided to go for it," says Mr. Blanchard. "It's like buying a new car. If you know what you want it's easy. Deciding what you want is the hard part."

And now that they are in business for themselves, the Blanchards are constantly making decisions. While the patterns help them to know what is in style, they still have to pick out the fabrics and colours. And in their business, you always have to be one step ahead of nature.

"You have to be one season in advance," says Mr. Blanchard. "In October we'll bring out the Christmas line, and in August we'll have some stuff to make Halloween costumes with."

The stock comes from suppliers in Toronto, and Mr. Blanchard says one of the benefits of his living in the city is that he can help his wife with ordering, and finding any items she may need.

"Because I am coming back and forth all the time, if there is something special that someone wants, Diane can give me a call and I'll bring it up the next time I come. It will be here within a week," he says. "There is nothing I can't get my hands on really quickly. I can even ship it up if they want."

While their new endeavour may keep them busy travelling for supplies, and minding the store, the couple is pleased with the direction they are taking, and are looking forward to working with the customers. After one week in business, there's no looking back.

Bakery has charm

"It took us until the end of March to get all the equipment we needed, going to auction sales, and buying things new," says Mrs. DeLong. "We started getting the building ready on May 1. The owner did the outside, and we did the interior. It was exciting getting it going."

The inside of the bakery adds to its appeal. The old fashioned blue and white wallpaper trimmed with hearts, an abundance of plants, baskets, and even an bread paddle in the corner, add to the effect of the home baking, by conjuring up thoughts of a country farm kitchen.

And the appeal of the bakery is obvious. The DeJongs have already received flattering comments from their customers, and more than one has been heard to remark "We'll see you next time," on their way out the door with their arms full of baking.

Lutterworth to give individual tax bills

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

After weeks of debate Lutterworth council reversed its decision to stop issuing individual tax bills to the residents of Hunter Creek Estates.

Council started giving each tenant a tax bill on an experimental basis two and a half years ago. Prior to that it was the responsibility of the development's owner to prepare the bills and make sure they were distributed.

When council sent out a letter explaining the new system, they failed to mention that it would be on a trial basis only.

"None of the residents were aware that the agreement was only on a trial basis, and the were quite surprised to find out we were even discussing (not issuing the individual bills)," said Lutterworth Reeve

Carol Puffer in a telephone interview. "That is partly why we decided to continue. Under the assessment act the property owner is responsible for taxes, but as an additional favour to the tenants we agreed to issue separate bills."

It was costing council $1,000 to have the 72 individual tax bills prepared over a two-week period, so they wanted to go back to the system where the development owner hired a private company to prepare the bills, or to get the mill-rate information and have the bills typed up in their own office.

More than 25 residents turned up at the council meeting last month to protest the decision, because it would mean they would have to pay more in maintenance fees in order to offset the cost to the owner.

The residents of the adult community park pay privately for road maintenance, snow plowing and garbage pickup, and don't require the use of the school system and busing. In May, Bill Payne, the manager of Mill Creek Properties, which recently bought the development, told council that his tenants end up paying the highest amount of taxes for the least number of services.

The tenants agreed with this statement at the last meeting, and William Bailey, who was representing the residents, reminded council that many of the tenants were on fixed incomes and the additional maintenance costs would place a burden on them.

Now that council has decided to continue issuing the individual tax bills, the township will have to absorb the $1,000 cost, and Puffer says "it's all part and parcel of the taxes we collect from Lutterworth residents."

'We were a bit apprehensive at first,' say Cliff and Helen Skelding about moving into Staanworth Terrace. They were the first residents to move in last month - after spending a month in limbo on Boshkung Lake.

Parents angered over poor health conditions at school

stallation of operable windows in the five classrooms and common room; silent fans to help with circulation in three of the rooms and air conditioning ducts in two rooms.

Mrs. Stainton said the ceiling fans used in some rooms are too noisy, and that the thermostat is so faulty the doors must sometimes be opened to let in cold air during winter.

Some recommendations by the association had already been carried out by the time of the meeting, such as repairs to the fresh air intake and air conditioner. Also, window blinds to be installed at the front of the school have already been ordered.

Mrs. Stainton asked that a comparative air quality study by the Health Unit be booked for November to monitor the effectiveness of any steps taken over the next few months.

"There are a lot of parents who are concerned that if this work isn't done during the summer months it isn't going to get done. We feel very strongly about this."

But the board's business director, Jim Bradley, said the health and safety branch of the province cites a danger level of 6,000 ppm per unit. He said 1,000 ppm will account for problems such as drowsiness. "All school boards are dealing with the problem across the province."

Accommodating children in kindergarten and Grade 1, the building is the former Dollo's IGA grocery store. The building has a temporary zoning and lease, and last school year there were 125 students attending.

"I don't think the IGA ever had that many customers, never mind students," said Mrs. Stainton. "Knowing this information, I wouldn't bring my daughter to the school now."

Trustee Wayne Wood reminded the representatives that the building is not a permanent school, so costly changes may not be worthwhile.

Trustee Ed de Grosbois added that extensive renovations might not be allowed by the building's landlord, Dave Dollo. "Is it possible to knock holes in the walls of a rented building?"

Later on in the meeting, board chairperson Wendy Ladurantaye said there have been changes since the time of the study, and that the air conditioner has improved. "This is the first year the school has been operating. It's not a perfect facility. I don't think anyone would expect it to be."

Bradley then quoted prices for the recommended changes, saying louvered windows would run about $1,200, with three fans costing an additional $3,300. He added that installation of air conditioning ducts would be minor work, and noted "there's only one school in the whole board that's air conditioned. I've been there (when the air conditioner wasn't working) and found that it's not really uncomfortable."

"They painted a very bad picture, but I don't think it's that gloomy, is it?" asked trustee Len Salvatori.

"Tom Reddering is asking for quality control beyond what the board can do," said director Stuart Baker. "There's also a limit to what you can expect Dollo's to allow in the way of cutting up their building. We have to go before the OMB (Ontario Municipal Board) for rezoning after two years anyway."

The trustees decided to instruct Bradley to make necessary alterations in stages. The blinds which are on order will be placed in the three large windows at the front, a window will be cut in the door of one of the back rooms and the air conditioning ducts will be installed. The air will be re-tested after each stage to determine their affect, and Bradley will report the results to the board.

Skeldings get used to their new home

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

EVEN THOUGH THEY WERE a month late moving in, the first residents of Staanworth Terrace still left their home in Carnarvon sooner than they expected.

"It was always something we had planned for far in the future," says Cliff Skelding, who moved into the apartments with his wife Helen at the end of May. "We knew we would like to come to the apartments and then go to a seniors' home."

When Mr. Skelding's health started to deteriorate because of cancer, their house became too much for them to maintain, and they decided to put their names on the waiting list for the new apartments which were being built in Minden.

After filling out a questionnaire, they were soon notified that they had been accepted as residents. The Skeldings decided to accept the offer, and put their house up for sale, not expecting the response they received.

The house sold in two days, and the Skeldings agreed to be moved out by the first of May—the date they had intended to move into their new apartment. However, delays pushed up the apartment's completion date, and the couple found themselves "vacationing" at the Homestead cottages on Boshkung Lake for a month.

"It gave us a month long holiday," says Mr. Skelding. "There was no telephone or television. We just sat and enjoyed Nature, and each other's company."

While they are enjoying their new home immensely, Mr. Skelding says he still feels "a twinge" when they drive by their old home in Carnarvon. "When you live somewhere for half your life, you get kind of used to it".

And it will take them a little while to get used to their new home as well. Going from a large house to a two-bedroom apartment is a big change that requires some adjustments.

"We were a bit apprehensive at first," says Mr. Skelding. "Helen had a 16' x 16' kitchen and now she only has a little one."

"All I really miss is the clothesline and the gas stove," adds Mrs. Skelding.

There are advantages to their new home as well. The couple is looking forward to having mail delivery right to their door within the next few weeks, so they don't have to venture out in any bad winter weather. They also enjoy being able to walk downtown to do their shopping, and visit with people on the street.

"We're really enthused with Minden," says Mr. Skelding. "It seems to be our hometown, even though we've never lived here."

There is also a distinct social network at the seniors' apartments in the area. Each one has a common room with chesterfields and chairs for people to meet in, and there are organized activities to participate in.

"If you want to get involved you can," says Mr. Skelding. "If you like your privacy you don't have to. It's the best of both worlds actually."

And the Skeldings are planning to take advantage of their new surroundings, by living each day to the fullest. "We're living in a modern world and we have to go along with it. Now we have a new modern building to live in as well."

Picnic coming up for Kushog Lake

carrying out an assessment of all the sewage disposal systems on Kushog between July 8 and August 2.

Lynn Johnstone encouraged the association members to become area representatives. The executive has organized the lake into sections, and each representative would be assigned a specific area. They would be responsible for welcoming new people to the lake, encouraging people to join the association, and acting as a liaison between the association and the cottagers.

Four new members were elected to the executive. Burrt Bonnell, Dave Jones, Gary Moore and Lil Coleman will be serving next year along with returning executive members Harvey Beadle, Bill Branson, Bev Chewka, Lynn Johnstone, Ross Poole, Rod Saunders, Marie Thomson, Bill Giddins, and Norma Goodger.

Following the meeting Bob Stewart the assistant director at the Leslie M. Frost Natural Resource Centre, and Ross Wray from the Ministry of Natural Resource's timber planning office, discussed the effects of the new timber management plan on Kushog lake residents.

The MNR is planning on removing trees from red oak stands around the northern tip of Kushog Lake in order to allow the oaks to grow (they need a great deal of sunlight, which is being blocked by other trees).

An information session was held two weeks ago at the Minden Curling Club where people with any concerns were invited to inspect the draft plan, ask questions, and make comments. Ross reminded the association members that the plan had not been finalized and they could still voice any concerns they may have.

The Kushog Lake picnic will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, August 5, at the Twin Rocks resort. Contests and races of all kinds will keep the whole family amused. The corn roast will be held at dusk, on Saturday, September 3.

Behaviour of media at rally was almost as bad as the skinheads'

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE
Martha Perkins

nie turned down for a job because of those 'equal opportunity' rules the government shoves down our throats? Who did they say that guy was again?"

In disgust, I walked away. I had heard these theories from Don Andrews, head of the Nationalist Party of Canada, when I had talked to him on the phone last week. But no one else was listening and I didn't use the information in my story. However, here were these white, non-Jewish reporters unwittingly playing right into the hands of Mr. Andrews and his ilk. They were being used, even though they obviously felt so superior. Don't tell me none of them tell Jewish Princess or racist jokes.

I realize now the locals should have started singing to drown out the interview—we should have protested the media's coverage. I'm glad to read that at least Bob Giuliano questioned them about it.

"I wish something would happen, then we'd have some news," one of the reporters said. I told him that as a person for whom Haliburton is a home, not just an arena for the fly-by-night cameras, my hope was exactly the opposite.

But there's more. Beattie lives five kilometres north of town, with no neighbours to the left or right. A fence runs in front of his property and a picnic table with a No Trespassing sign blocked the driveway, along with a few security guards. Little boys playing G-I Joe, only their weapons were real.

The media—sometimes upwards of 20 people and by far the majority of spectators, if you discount the police—would wander from one end of the property to another, often exchanging taunts with the skinheads. The area became a school yard, the bullies on one side, the more reputable kings of the sandbox on the other. (There were women there, but most of them were busy playing Professional Career Woman On Her Way Up.) I was the only one taking notes of what the reporters said.

"What do you guys want from us," one of the skinheads asked (quite politely). "Bloodshed and violence," the Ottawa Citizen replied (quite seriously).

"I wish something would happen, then we'd have some news," one of the reporters said. I told him that as a person for whom Haliburton is a home, not just an arena for the fly-by-night cameras, my hope was exactly the opposite.

Later another reporter came up to the plain-clothes OPP officer I was talking to, complaining that the other policemen weren't friendly. This swaggering young lad had the audacity to boast it was the press which was keeping the skinhead/neo-Nazi movement under control. What an egotistical fool.

Perhaps he was one of the reporters who, whenever Beattie would appear, would try to taunt him to speak. "Why won't you talk to us? You used to talk a lot when you were younger (and the leader of the Canadian Nazi Party). What's the matter, you getting old?" Nah-nah-nah-nya-nya.

Even though I knew I'd also be writing a story for The Globe and Mail, when most people asked me what paper I was working for, I'd reply The Haliburton County Echo. I wasn't going to fall into the vain game of one-upmanship among the media personnel and I was just as proud to be associated with the Echo as any other paper.

Eventually I found the camaraderie among reporters to be somewhat unpleasant. Just as the skinheads tried to feel better about themselves by insulting blacks and Jews, many of the reporters would mock their readers, people they've interviewed and fellow reporters. All these people playing investigative muckracker and they couldn't even probe past the veneer of their own soul.

This isn't to say the reporters were the evil ones gathered at Beattie's house. Photographs make the skinheads look rough and tough. Some of them were; they wanted their hate to be their badge. But I laughed at others because they were just little boys wearing dress up clothes and hiding their insecurity behind tattoos.

There was one boy who was hurt when called a Nazi. His father had proudly fought in the war. But to the boy's point of view, he couldn't work because immigrants stole jobs away from him, he had to be violent otherwise he'd be beaten up and to top it all off, the middle class society was spurning him by calling him a Nazi. Self-doubt and confusion in his eyes, he turned and went back to the crowd which had accepted him and given him a sense of belonging.

That evening, when a cross was burnt and they yelled "What do we want? White Power! When do we want it? Now!" I wondered if that boy had just lost part of his "goodness". Rally by rally, the evilness will seep in and he'll only remember the hatred, because hatred will be the only thing which will give him a sense of power.

The evil was there and some manipulators used it to indoctrinate young minds. Others wanted to twist it to their own professional advantage. They were living off each other, these two groups, and I for one hope that Minden never becomes their stage again.

And the winner is...

Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey draws the first Guild of Fine Arts Winning Wednesday name out of the bag at the Bank of Montreal in Haliburton last Wednesday. Janice Archer of London won $100 and her name was put back in the draw for next week. Barbara Wood from the bank, outgoing Guild president Virginia Muenzel and draw chairperson Lynne Hoppenreys look on. There are still a few tickets available at the gallery or bank.

Waiting for hospital delivery

should take a more positive approach, and offer to call it the 'John Eakins Continuing Care Unit,' if he can actually deliver within a ten-day period. If he doesn't, we can turn around and use the same technique with the Minister of Health, and offer to call it the 'Eleanor Caplan Continuing Care Unit,' with the same ten-day deadline.

If that doesn't work, we can move the offer right to the top. How could he resist endorsing the 'David Peterson Continuing Care Unit'?

Besides, we can tell him that if he doesn't come through with the funds by the deadline, then it's definitely going to be named the 'Patricia Starr Continuing Care Unit.'

Heck, maybe we should talk to the lady anyhow. She seems to know a lot about raising money, and getting action at Queen's Park.

Frankly, part of our problem may be the same lack of visibility that we seem to have for Toronto TV stations when they report the weather for 'Muskoka and the Kawarthas' each night. People who want to get attention when Queen's Park doesn't seem to know they exist — and don't have a friend 'on the inside' to smooth things over — often go down there and get themselves noticed.

When they tried to legislate some weight controls on those enormous dump trucks, the drivers ringed Queen's Park Circle with them. When the police tried to make them move on, they threatened to take their keys and leave the trucks where they stood.

Maybe we should load up a few of the big logging trucks we have around here, cover them with placards reminding the government about the hospital delay, and drive around the Circle.

We're probably going to have to wait until fall, of course, when the Legislature is back sitting again. But, do you really think any 'hospital bed review' is really going to be completed by then, anyhow?

I propose we all start now to pledge a dollar for every day's delay to a Queen's Park Protest Fund. If we don't have the word by September when they go back to work, we'll be able to pay for gas for the school buses and logging trucks and picket signs.

The day they open the legislature with all the pomp and ceremony and horse-drawn carriages would seem like a nice time to visit.

And if the funds should happen to come through, we can put our pledge dollars in the Hospital Expansion Fund to cover our inflated costs...

increase of inflation or the average wage increase—our local politicians should be making it easier for us not harder.

The attitude seems to be it's not my problem if you have to work for a living, it's yours and if you don't like it, tough!

In my view this has not solved a problem, only created a lot more of them. If the dump is closed guess where the garbage will be left!

I for one will remember at election time when the promises and hand shaking are going on.

Yours,

Responding to recycling

To the Editor:

— This is the year that we are reducing the amount of garbage that goes into the beautiful ravines of our area. There are bins for recycling glass, tins and paper at Haliburton and Harcourt dump sites, at the West Guilford store and the Haliburton Lake Fort Irwin main corners. Bins will also be in place soon in the Snowdon dumps.

Some plastics can be recycled. The Eagle Lake Women helped with a collection of plastic grocery bags and some plastic food containers which gave Murray Clarke a truckload for a recycling plant in Toronto. There will be more such depots for plastic Wilberforce in July, Haliburton Village in August and again in Eagle Lake in September. Watch for details in The Echo.

The Echo has been very effective in spreading the good word about environmental issues and problems and keeping us up-to-date on what is happening in our area. I understand that the county will soon have blue boxes available to assist the recycling process and we will read about that, I am sure, in The Echo.

This is also the year that we know about safe cleaning materials. Baking soda, vinegar, and ammonia, for example, can replace the toxic products we used to buy to clean and shine our household equipment. Our stores are responding to our demand for safer detergents and recycled paper products. This year we realize that the poisons we use for cleaning eventually end up in the water we drink.

We are also finding out that all of this is extra work for everyone. It was so easy to put all trash in a plastic bag and add it to the disgusting pile of rubbish in the ever-growing garbage areas. It was so easy to pick up food sealed in plastic and so easy for stores to put it all in plastic. Some good signs are appearing.

Black's Hardware give 10 cents off if you have your own bag. They also have shelves of safe cleaners and the directions for their use. The Butcher Block wraps meat in heavy, waxed paper with no plastic tray. These are encouraging trends.

Norm Barry, whose disposal company looks after the recycling bins, says we are using the bins in a satisfactory way. He asks that no plastic go into the bins and he does prefer the tins flattened.

We women in Eagle Lake have been a bit slow in making our famous "We Recycle" bags but we will have more in the Eagle Lake Store soon. Donations for these bags go to the County of Haliburton Association for a New Green Environment—CHANGE.

Loop inspires horror

To the Editor:

If five billion people pour their orange juice from plastic containers into plastic cups, drink it, then toss the lot into plastic bags — the environment is affected.

If five billion people continue to purchase and use chlorofluorocarbon based products — tears in the ozone layer grow worse.

If the proportionately smaller number of people introduce a snowmobile loop into a proportionately smaller parcel of the environment — the damage is just as great. The damage represents another chip in the bark of Earth's ecosystem. When enough chips add up — the tree — the Earth — dies. It is a simple equation.

I am from New Jersey. My family has owned a cottage in this area since 1946. Are we the people the proposed loop is supposed to attract?

It was with great horror that we read of the loop plan. We see this area as a refuge from the very noise, mindless activity, intrusion and callous disregard for nature we come here to escape.

You have something rare and precious here in Haliburton. Please don't despoil it.

Anything so noisy, heavy and pointless as roaring through a pristine winter habitat is as obviously destructive as plastic waste and CFCs.

Please don't be egocentric. Be ecocentric for a change.

Yours,
Cathy, Frans and Cais Jurgens

To the Editor:

So, the abominable snowmobile is about to invade our natural beauty and tranquility and forge a chain of steel, gas fumes, litter, and mostly noise around the Haliburton loop. And that awesome silence that Admiral Byrd (who insisted on manning an Antarctic weather base alone in the winter of 1934) says: "I paused to listen to the silence... harmony... that was what came out of the silence — a gentle rhythm, the strain of the perfect chord, the music of the spheres. to taste peace and quiet and solitude long enough to find out how grand they really are." Will be no more. Instead, the snowmobiles shout down the wind, drive all the animals away. That unbearably noisy chain strangles us in winter. And in the summer, the unbearable noisy power boats roar their mindless circles.

Boats and snowmobilers claim to be out to enjoy nature. As I sit on my deck, in summer book in hand, I reflect on the boats out to make waves — to deepest and noisiest impression and expression on placid waters. In winter, beside my fireplace, book in hand, I reflect on the snowmobilers who day and (after)night are out there battling the elements, concentrating to keep within the ruts created by others like-minded. What animal will not run in terror from that power? But, they claim, we stop to look at nature. Or, to have a drink or give their numb bums and rattled brains a rest before taking up the challenge again, controlling the mighty machine.

Who decides this important issue about a snowmobile loop? Surely the pro-snowmobilers would not object to a little experiment. I suggest we arrange a winter fireside seminar where all concerned (especially pros) can voice their opinion. But we hold it in a pleasant home beside the potential loop. Then have 8,000 snowmobiles (Creighton Feir's figure for a weekend) go by. Then register the votes of the deciders — if they can be heard.

My family has enjoyed a large acreage in Monmouth Township for over 30 years. We are trying to preserve the naturalness while trying to open it up sensitively and creatively to other conservationists like ourselves. We try to do all our grocery, limber, gift and miscellaneous shopping in Haliburton or Gooderham. We believe in giving our money back to the people who have welcomed us to this glorious environment. And we encourage others to do the same especially to employ the local builders and maintenance people.

I would be interested to learn the name of the local merchants who want and oppose the snowmobile loop. As president of the Little Glamor (Bear) Lake cottages association I would like to take this list to our annual meeting this summer (70 families) and ask them to decide where their future business will go.

We are 'from the earth'

To the Editor:

"Roll away the ocean; roll away the sea; go and join your partners, form community." These words are being sung by the "children from the streets" of the Peace Shelter at Dumaguette City, Negros Oriental, in the Philippines. The children are saying that no longer must the oceans and seas be seen as barriers to present the formation of our one world community.

These children are reflecting the reality of today's world. We, too, must see our earth the way it naturally is: A beautiful, reproductive island within the universe. By its very nature our planet is already a complete, self-sustaining unit. We, its inhabitants, must protect, preserve, and enhance it, in its positive, productive unity.

The divisions arising out of newsy sensationalism must no longer be given precedence within our global community. While doing voluntary work (December/88) with Habitat for Humanity and associating with the Peace Shelter in the Philippines, I was experiencing the real world. My recent involvements with H.A.V.E.'s projects in India, and my extensive travels throughout Thailand, Malaysia, and Indonesia reminded me very vividly of the reality of our world community. When being asked, therefore, by those in my presence: "Where are you from?" I could sincerely respond: "I am from earth. Where are you from?" For me it was especially noteworthy that such an answer was an obvious reality, even to some of my so-called illiterate enquirers.

Gerry Feltham,
H.A.V.E.'s Compassionate Officer.

Ah, those days of summer in the country

ed their way. Someone would yell 'Portage' and they'd all go down on shore to watch the paddlers arrive. Although the proper portage route was not across their property, the campers almost always landed by their dock because it was clear of bush and much easier to get the canoes hoisted up onto their shoulders before setting off on the path to the next lake.

When the kids were very young they'd stand in awe of these powerful canoeists, loaded down with back packs and clinking pots, extra clothing hanging about their necks and waists, sweating in the hot summer sun. It wasn't until they were a little older that one of them saw the potential there. What would be the number one sensation of someone who has just paddled almost the full length of a large lake dressed for every possible change in the weather, under the blazing lake-reflected sun? Thirst.

There was a small cabin, sometimes rented but usually kept for their own guests, that stood very close to the spot the portagers beached. It had a hinged window and if you removed the screen it was like a little door halfway up the side of the building. They made a large pitcher or two of lemonade or Freshie and put it aside in the old beer fridge. One of the cousins made a big crayon-lettered sign that read 'Lemonade 5 cents' and this they thumb-tacked to the side of the cabin by the window. The ledge was just wide enough to line up plastic glasses. This was to let the campers know they were open for business.

Red faced and dripping with brow, they would pull their canoes up on shore and then spot the sign. Since their counsellors were just as hot and thirsty, there was no hesitation about giving the children some business. They'd gulp down a glass, sometimes two, for the glasses were not very big, before turning back to their task of lifting and carrying. If it looked like they might run short, the middle sister, who later went on to a very successful career in the restaurant business, would add more water to spin out the drinks. They got to know when to expect that long line out in the bay and they were ready.

The night after a day of portagers, they had extra money to spend at the store. The middle sister was the only one who saved part of her's. She kept it in a large pickle jar which was hidden in her room.

The kids also sold bait. Little green frogs, worms, grasshoppers, crayfish and minnows. What they sold depended on what was most plentiful at the time. If the weather had been hot and dry, the tall grass in the field by the boathouse was alive with grasshoppers. If there had been a lot of rain, then a shovel would unearth a mass of curling, squirming worms and the frogs would hop like fleas on a hound as you walked through the grass. Crayfish were a little different. Weather didn't seem to have much effect on them. Some years there were just more than others.

Each child had their own favourite place to set out a minnow trap and if a really good spot was found it was a secret guarded jealously. Eventually the spot would be discovered however and then everyone would use it until a new place had to be found. The bait was sold to the people who rented the cabins. Since a row boat was included with each cabin and since the little bay was well known for its good fishing, most wanted to at least try their luck.

However, the highlight of each summer was the show. It took various forms over the years and was held in various locations throughout the property. The degree of sophistication, in terms of costumes and content, also changes as the kids grew older. But one common thread ran through all the performances. There was an admission charge. Now we're talking about thirty years ago. The kids and their shows were not competing against videos and the like.

One particular year stood out. One of the fathers had erected a huge canvas tent out behind the cottage and the six children scrounged all the chairs they could find. These they lined up in neat rows facing the front of the tent where a stage area had been set aside and marked with empty tomato juice cans. The cans were always saved for bait and cleaning brushes.

Costumes consisted of daisies woven into chains, belts, scarves, feathers and jewellery added to bathing suits and their parents' oversized clothes for a theatrical effect. Soda crackers spread with peanut butter and jam together with plastic glassed of the now famous Freshie served as refreshments. Besides the usual skits and singing in harmony, this one summer the kids decided to go a little more professional.

They ran a series of extension cords from the cottage's outside outlet to the tent, bringing it in under the tent wall to the side of the stage. A record player was plugged into it and at the appointed moment, a record began to spin while two sisters in full regalia mouthed the words and waved their bodies meaningfully to the music. Unfortunately, halfway through the number the needle became stuck and for what seemed like an eternity the two youngsters on stage were forced to repeat exactly the same motions. Finally one of their cousins tapped the side of the needle to move it along and with a screeching whine the song ended abruptly. Only slightly shaken from this flaw in an otherwise perfect show, the young performers took their bows to the audience's applause.

Then the food was brought out and the adults complimented the kids on the evening's entertainment. They smiled through their made-up faces, feeling like celebrities. They ended up eating most of the refreshments themselves, and in the morning couldn't believe the mess they were faced with cleaning up.

Years later they cringed in embarrassment every time they thought of those shows. But when they were young they just had a good time.

Sun and fun at Guilford's Canada Day

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A GREAT CROWD turned out in West Guilford to celebrate Canada Day and beat the heat through singing, swimming, sawing and much more.

Many parents had it made in the shade when they rested at picnic tables by the recreation centre to munch on burgers and sip cool drinks, but they didn't stay in hiding for long.

Few could resist watching the young ones in the wheelbarrow, three-legged and sack races (especially since most of the children had painted faces—among the pussy-cats and monsters were a few red-and-white Canadian flag masks, with a maple leaf right on the nose).

Some knew the perfect way to cool off, but those who didn't bring their bathing suits could only pant while watching the swimmers at Pine Lake. Still,

Girl to tell Stanhope some recycling ideas

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

A nine year-old Archie Stouffer Elementary School student is willing to share her concerns over recycling with the Stanhope Council.

In a recent letter to the council, Corinne Timbers wrote that she was worried about the lack of recycling where she lives on Hall's Lake.

"I moved here from Brampton in November where we were used to having blue boxes," she wrote. "I understand that it isn't the same here as in the city. But, I think it would be a good idea to get a recycling bin at our landfill site in Stanhope Township."

Corinne, who is in Grade 4, became aware that recycling was an issue in the area when the school started a recycling program.

"Mrs. Davies brought in a can and told us about recycling. When she was done she crushed the can and saved it for the bin," says Corinne. "Most classes have a bin for pop cans (a cardboard box painted blue). They also told us to bring plastic bags to the gym because a man is going to try to recycle them."

At the end of the letter to the council, Corinne wrote "I would be willing to come to one of the meetings to talk about the landfill site and the recycling bin if you would like". Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis and the other members of council were so pleased with the letter it didn't take long for them to decide to take Corinne up on her offer.

"We were thrilled to receive her letter," says Davis. "We are not going to let it die there. We are going to have her to the next meeting. It will be something she will never forget."

Davis is pleased the school children are taking such an interest in the environment. Like any education process, he says it is important to teach people while they are young.

"I think more children are going to become involved," he says. "The schools are becoming more involved in recycling, and this is a great help. Education is the key to this whole thing, and if you teach them when they are young, that's half the problem solved."

Although she admits she will be nervous when she goes before council, Corinne is prepared to tell them it would be a good idea to get a bin. "Recycling helps the land," she says in an interview at her home on Sunday.

'Sometimes we go to the dump to see the raccoons, and hear a clink and bang. Those are things that could have been recycled.'

"Sometimes we go to the dump to see the raccoons, and you hear a clink and a bang. Those are things that could have been recycled."

Brian and Liz Timbers, Corinne's parents, are also impressed with the interest their daughter is showing in the recycling issue.

"In Brampton recycling was touched on in the media, not in the schools. Children her age didn't realize the damage being done," says Mrs. Timbers. "Here they are exposed to the issue in school, which is good. Kids need to know that if they throw a pop can out the window it's going to do some damage."

"Corinne has become a lot more aware, and it makes us a lot more aware. It is refreshing to see."

Money for bus raised through walk

SENIOR LEAGUE

by Winnifred Barnum

To start another week we had a tea party Thursday provided and served by the Anglican Church Women. Mrs. Nancy Gayton played the piano during the tea party which helped to make it enjoyable.

Tom McAllister came Thursday night and called bingo for us. We appreciate very much having a caller.

Thursday night was graduation at Archie Stouffer's School. Alice Todd attended as Chris, her grandson graduated into high school. Also attending was Lola Prentice, whose great-granddaughter, Tanya Berry, won a special award. Several of the residents' relatives graduated and received awards.

Friday afternoon Marjory Renick, Mrs. Warburton, Byrl and Bob Fleming entertained us with a hymn sing. Grace Coburn let the singing for the first part. Bob Fleming sang several solos which were very enjoyable. Mrs. Renick accompanied the program on the piano and sang.

Lola Prentice had her cousin Ross Cheney to visit her Wednesday.

Friday night Bill Payne, George Smith and Don were here to entertain us.

Eldon Deacon, who usually comes, had other commitments that evening. Of course the residents really enjoyed them.

Saturday morning was our walkathon to raise funds to help buy a new bus, which we need badly. Everyone who walked completed the walk. We sincerely thank those who walked and those who sponsored them.

In the afternoon Doris and Linda took the residents who wished to go to Haliburton for part of the Highland Games. It was made much more enjoyable by the thoughtfulness of Gary McKnight who made it possible for us to sit in the shade and he had chairs for Hyland Crest all arranged for us in a reserved area. Everyone had a good time except for those pesky big flies. We wish to thank Ellen Holden, Deloris Bailey, volunteers who assisted those who needed help.

Sunday chapel service was held by Re. John Burgess.

There were movies Monday night shown by Ena Marion and Ruth Rice.

Terry and Norma took me down to Peterborough to see my sister, Mary Cameron who is waiting for a bed in the hospital to have surgery.

Last week Pearl Kernohan visited Hyland Crest to see several friends who are residents here.

Sunday Denise and Bud Teasdale called her to see Bud's mother and other friends who are here.

There were three birthdays during this week, Grace Coburn, June 23, Ada Lewis, June 27, and we are very sorry Ina McGuire, June 27, was celebrated in Peterborough hospital. Happy birthday to all.

Isabel Gardiner has returned after a stay in the hospital. We are glad to have her back.

Tuesday Linda and Doris took us for a bus ride to Kinmount, Fenelon Falls, and home by Highway 35. Our trip was made very pleasant by the music and singing of Jack Foster and his wife Ruth. We thank them and the volunteers Peggy and Doris. We had a happy drive and really appreciate it.

The Strawberry tea and bazaar was held Wednesday June 28, in the auditorium. The attendance was very good for both the strawberry tea and the bazaar. Both had a successful afternoon. The quilt was drawn for at 3:30 PM and the winner was Georgina Deaks, a member of Hyland Crest Auxiliary. Thanks to the volunteers who helped so well with the bazaar Mary Guilman, Ellen Holden, and Peggy Dixon.

Stella Walker and Alice Jones came to see Ruby Lewis. they brought in a video tape of the last service in the Haliburton Baptist Church by Rev. John Smith before he left to take charge of the Chatham Church. They invited me to watch it with Ruby. It was very good.

Doris Chambers awaits a hot cup of tea from former teacher Erniece Warder at a retirement party held in her honour. Miss Chambers will be leaving J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School.

School bids fond farewell to very dedicated teacher

By FELLOW COLLEAGUES

In the afternoon of Thursday, June 29th, the staff of the J.D. Hodgson Elementary School held a retirement tea to honour Miss Doris Chambers for her many years of service and dedication to her profession of teaching. We wish her well in her new beginning. The gathering attested to the esteem in which she was held and to our appreciation for her fine efforts throughout the years.

With a summer course under her belt, the youthful, confident Miss Chambers began her career in Cedar Valley near Newmarket in an old church. The enrollment was 50 active and unruly children in Grades 1 to 8. After a hectic month, coupled with much persuasion, another teacher was hired to relieve the situation and the church was divided into two rooms. Following such a demanding introduction to the profession, she chose to remain in teaching and entered Toronto Teachers' College in 1954, to complete her training. Upon graduation, Doris taught for one year in Armitage, near Aurora. After three years at Ballantrae, Doris decided to leave York County and venture to Haliburton County.

In our County, Doris began as principal and teacher at Irondale, which was a one room school with 13 pupils ranging from Grades 1 to 8.

When Irondale school closed, Doris went to teach in the Eagle Lake School where she remained until 1972 when the local townships were consolidated to form the Haliburton County Board of Education.

With the closing of the Eagle Lake School, Doris was transferred into the Victoria Street School where she taught Grade 3 from 1972 to 1982.

Doris then came to the J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School and has been involved with children at the grade 3 and 5 levels.

During Doris' career, she has been a supportive and active member of F.W.T.A.O. for several years served on the local executive.

Doris is a reserved person who has willingly shared her professional knowledge and expertise with fellow teachers. We have greatly benefited from her quick insight into situations, her organizational and problem solving skills as well as her understanding and patience.

Doris not only promoted independence and self-sufficiency, but gave strength and guidance to colleagues when the opportunity presented.

To her students, she gave a solid, total commitment. In times of educational change, she had the courage to stand firm in her beliefs. Doris demanded, with sound discipline and humour, a high standard of quality and mutual respect. In order to best meet the needs of students, she kept abreast of trends, material and ideas. She was always searching for a better way to assist each child overcome unique difficulties. Individuals, nurtured in her wise ways, attained a sound grounding in skills while at the same time matured under her guidance. She is to be commended for her professional achievements and successful, personal milestones.

School teacher Doris Chambers was honoured at a retirement tea last week. To her students, she gave solid, total commitment. In times of educational change, she had the courage to stand firm in her beliefs.

Doris plans to retire to the Aurora area where she will be close to family. Doris thoroughly enjoys travelling and will therefore be spending some of her time in the pursuit of this activity. For personal growth, Doris intends to find new avenues of endeavour.

We are pleased that Doris chose to make her home in the Highlands of Haliburton. During her stay, she has touched and enriched many of our lives in her quiet, gentle ways. We will truly miss her in the community, but we sincerely wish her many wonderful years of health and happiness in the days ahead—a new beginning.

The Miracle of Friendship—There's a miracle called "Friendship", that dwells within the Heart, and you don't know how it happens or when it gets its start. But the happiness it brings you, always gives a special lift and you realize that friendship is God's most precious gift!

Guilford honours Canada

only two took part in a race to swim across the lake.

There were several competitions and awards. The following are the winners:

Holly Sisson was honoured to win the Pioneer Citizen Award for service to the community. He and wife Sylvia also won as the grandparents with the most descendants attending the festivities.

Greg Stamp and Corey Burdon were chosen as Mr. and Miss Canada Day at a teen dance.

Blanche Lynton and Whitney Carr were honoured for being the oldest man and woman at the gathering, while Christine Carr and Adam Cooper were the youngest.

Five-year-old Alana Woodcock won a prize for best-decorated bike. Her two-wheeler was festooned with balloons, flowers and streamers in pink and other pastel colors.

Joan Ogle won in the apple peeling contest. With steady hand and determined precision, she managed to peel an 88 inch long piece and won $13 (half of the pot for the 50 cent competition).

Kristen Sisson was the closest to guessing how many jelly beans were in a bear-shaped jar, and won the whole thing for her estimate of 600 (there were 594).

A duet by Katie Rodley and Krista Brown won them the amateur contest, and Anita Richardson won for her tasty pie.

Men's Horseshoe Pitch: George Nicholls and Lockie Morrison; Pine Lake Swim: Mark Stamp; Men's Cross-cut Saw: Brant Stamp and Perry Morrison; Nail Drive—Men's: Shane Sisson; Women's: tie between Colleen Mulholland and Caroline Bishop; Boys': Ken Teasdale; Girls': Shannon Robichaud.

PUBLIC NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the Council of the Municipal Corporation of the Township of Stanhope proposes to enact a by-law to stop up, close and convey to the abutting property owners those parts of original allowance for road set out and described as follows:

FIRSTLY: All and Singular those certain parcels or tracts of land and premises situate, lying and being in the Township of Stanhope in the County of Haliburton and being composed of part of the original sixty-six foot road allowance between Lot 15 and Lot 16, Concession VIII, being more particularly described as Parts 2 and 3 on a Plan deposited in the Registry Office for the Registry Division of the County of Haliburton as Plan 19R 4378.

THE PROPOSED BY-LAW will come before the said council for consideration at its regular meeting at the Municipal Office in the Township of Stanhope on the 9th day of August, 1989 at the hour of 10:30 a.m., and at that time, the council will hear, in person, anyone who claims that his land will be prejudicially affected and who applied to be heard.

DATED: June 23, 1989.

Executive, show, summer student are all new

GUILD NOTES

by Virginia Muenzel

WELCOME to July! I have so much to tell you. But the most important news is that the Guild has a new president. I hope you will join me in extending your congratulations, as well as your support to Pearl Foster, of Tory Hill. Pearl has been a Guild member since 1986. She is very enthusiastic, and has a great deal of respect for the Guild. She has been a active volunteer at the Summer Sale and Exhibition as well as with other activities. Welcome aboard, Pearl!

The first draw for the Winning Wednesdays Lottery was held at the Bank of Montreal last week. Janice Archer, from London, Ontario won $100. There are about 30 lottery tickets left, and after today, still forty-eight draws, plus the big draw for $5,000. Several groups are having fun with the lottery by going together on tickets. They give themselves silly group names. Don't forget, if you win one week, your name goes back into the lottery with the possibility of winning any number of times. And with only 200 tickets sold, the odds are in your favour. It's a great way to support the Guild.

Our summer student begins working at the Rails' End Gallery this week. Dorothy Sanderson of Wilberforce attends H.H.S.S. She is a musician and artist. Dorothy won first place at the Bancroft Music Festival for her own piano composition. She has also won two Guild art bursaries. I'm sure her sunny face will be a great asset to the Gallery this summer.

Once again, it's time for the Faculty Show, in conjunction with Sir Sandford Fleming College School of Fine Arts. The faculty has put together a very imaginative collection of work this year. There are a lot of fun pieces, as well as excellent workmanship. Some of the artists participating are; Dennis Gedden, Wendy Bateman, John and Marilyn Leonard, Lois Betteridge, Sandy Cline, Pauline Holacine, Hanna Rothschild, Paul and Beverly Williams, Paul Portelli, and Bill Fitches.

If that weren't enough, in the Waiting Room Gallery is a show called From the A to M of Basketry with Ankaret Dean and Melinda Mayhall. The aims of the show are twofold — to see basketry as an expressive art form; and to have fun. All baskets use various traditional techniques, such as coiling a fish trap. However, the manner of building them is not traditional. Both artists have wonderful freedom of colour and form. People visiting this exhibit from July 1 to August 1 can participate in naming two mystery baskets. At the end of the show, the artists will select the two persons with the accurate titles for the baskets. You may enter as often as you like.

Highland Games' music and dancing were superb

CARNARVON

by Ann McKay

Mrs. Bill McKay is spending some time at their cottage on Matogami Lake in Northern Ontario. Son Greg spent the weekend at Richmond Hill attending the annual family gathering of the Moore clan.

Mr. and Mrs. John Coombs of Lindsay spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carpenter who were celebrating 17 years of marriage. Our congratulations. Most people will know Mrs. Coombs by her maiden name, Joan Kid you know that the Silver Anniversary of the Haliburton Highlands Build of Fine Arts Summer Sale and Exhibition begins on July 28? Remember last summer's heat? Well, I think the committee has finally come up with a way to handle the problem. The layout of the show has been totally re-arranged so that most of it is in the AIR-CONDITIONED part of the building. The show has also been shortened to nine days, and several new artists are participating. So don't miss the festivities.

Cross. She lived in the village and went to school here.

Our daughter Laurie, husband Harold and son Mark of Brockville spent a few days with us.

Congratulations to Joan Irish and her committee for a splendid job of putting together Haliburton's first Highland Games. Judging by the number of people there I would say it was a great success. The dancing was superb and the music stirring. For many of us from over there the swinging Kelts and bright tartans were very emotional.

Latest report on Jack Gregory: he is still in Sunnyside and coming along

Guilford is mourning over local deaths

GUILFORD
by Eleanor Cooper

This column has scarcely been free of sympathy notes since the first of this year. It continues, sad to say, with the news of John Scott's death. John was a brother to Ben of Oshawa, Archie of Lutterworth Pines, Ev Stata of Haliburton, and Selina Scott of West Guilford. Our sympathy to these relatives and to all who held him dear.

The same concern is felt at this time for the relatives of Ida Schell who died last week at Hyland Crest.

July 1 saw the citizen of the year award go to Holly Sisson who was obviously as surprised as he was pleased by the announcement. It is a well deserved tribute to a man high in the affection of not only his family but of the community as well.

Next year for Canada Day the suggestion is to make it a Guilford School Reunion day, so get out your pictures, all former pupils of S.S. No. 2 and 3 Guilford. Come and celebrate together with former classmates and teachers.

The announcement of Mike Griffin and Rhonda Bryant's marriage was intended for last week. Congratulations and good wishes from all your friends and relatives.

Weekend company at Iris Freeman's included Bonnie and Jonathan Freeman from Palmerston, daughter Deborah with her husband Pat Lees, and daughter Michelle and her husband Jim Virgelio. Both couples are from Uxbridge.

Rae Gourvette was a visitor a Sid and Louise Cooper's last week when some of Jaro Cooper's relatives and friends celebrated his 19th birthday with him.

Pam and Rod Roberts hosted a farewell party on Sunday for Joe and Mickey Eaton who will be leaving Haliburton.

Congratulations to Rhonda Bryant on her marriage at Maple Lake United Church on Saturday, June 17.

On June 23 the Grade eight graduates from Guilford included: Skye Austen, valedictorian for her class, Chad Bain, Stephanie Bain, Andrea Barry, Cori Burden, Danny and Laura Chumbley, Sonja Fluegel, Dawn Hebert, Sarah Lilius, Jean Morrison, Michael Morrison, Derek Rowden, Deanna Houghton, Michelle Simms, and Angela Teasedale. Congratulations one and all. An added touch was the gift of a rose from Edna Burden to each of the West Guilford girls who were part of this ceremony. Pat Bain was given special recognition from staff in the presentation of a bouquet of roses at the beginning of the graduation exercises.

The next day the Grade 12 graduates from this area at commencement included Troy Austen, Kellie Bird, Rusty Fraser, Angela Morrison, Lyndel Morrison, and Chirs Saunders, and Jim Hilliard. Grade 13 graduates included Jaro Cooper, whose valedictory was outstanding, and Nora Morrison.

About 120 people attended St. Andrew's Church Salad supper at the Centre on Saturday. Thanks to all the St. Andrew's Church ladies who made it a success. It was fun at the work bee getting ready for it all on the previous night.

Correction re Kay

Barry—the word was town not Toronto. They still live in Haliburton.

In Appreciation

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of you for making my first year in the real estate profession such a success. The past year has been very busy, averaging more than one successfully transacted sale per week. To Vendors and Purchasers, thanks for putting your trust in me.

Thanks to all other agents for listing the properties which I sold, and who sold the properties which I listed. Thanks to our secretary and management staff for all of your help. Thanks to the financing people, advertising people and solicitors who helped to complete the transactions. And last but certainly not least a big thanks goes out to my wife and children who put up with a lot of late nights and missed appointments.

Thank you one and all and REMEMBER!
Whether you are considering buying or selling,
Put your real estate FUTURE in good hands TODAY when you call BILL KULAS.

Programs to be explained to comrades

July 4. This is the first of other meetings which will follow. There will be full details later, but Chairman Gerald Irish would appreciate the full cooperation of all Legionnaires for this event on August 11, 12 and 13. The President and Executive fully support this request.

Best wishes for a speedy recovery are extended to Verna Draper who, after a heart operation in Spokane, Washington, has been flown to Toronto for rest and recovery. We look forward to seeing Grenville, who is expected to return to Haliburton this week.

A supportive member of Branch 129, comrade Hugh Lester, is on a trip to Holland. We wish him a safe return.

Zone Commander, Ken Bell, of Omeme, held a mini-council meeting in Fenelon a week ago for his officers, chairmen and Branch Presidents in the 13 branches. Branch 129 is well represented on council with Sylvia Sisson as Deputy Zone Commander, Mabel Brannigan, Secretary, Fred Knight, Membership Chairman, Maxine Cross, Assistant Sports Chairman, and Irv Chambers as Colour Sgt.

There will be another new feature for Branch 129. Beginning on August 2, 1989, each Wednesday from 4:30 to 5:30 PM, our Legion Seniors' officer, Comrade Doreen Hawman, will be at the Branch to explain seniors' programs and to answer questions relating to these programs. Since Doreen has had valuable experience in this field, let us take advantage of this opportunity.

Important upcoming dates are the blood donor clinic on July 11; the D.V.A. representative will attend at the Branch between 10:00 AM and noon on July 25; the Branch Executive meeting will be at 7:30 PM on July 27, and the Ladies will hold another flea market on July 29.

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by Marian Donovan

Sometimes I get a little bit frustrated writing this column, either because I have no item of interest to write, or something I have written has been omitted. Then something nice happens to spur me on, like the interesting letter I received this week, via the Echo. It was from Mr. Alec Murphy who has a cottage on Rock Lake who tells me that several years ago his wife, Elizabeth, found the knitting design officially approved by the Girl Guide Association, knitted a sweater and donated it to the Wilberforce Brownie who sold the most Girl Guide Cookies. Elizabeth has faithfully knitted the sweater each year since, in loving memory of their daughter Heather, who was very active in the Girl Guide movement until her death. The Murphy's also donate large quantities of Campbells Soup can labels to the Wilberforce Brownie household included Beth with two friends who are also attending the Sutherland-Chan School of Massage Therapy: Martha Howatt and Janice Horsnell. We also had friends of Andy's, Lynn Cornish and Marla Dow. Congratulations to Alan Cooper and Sophie Ford on the Announcement of their engagement.

Martin and Cyd Rapson, Michael and Wende Rapson, and Bill and Gerry Rapson were all at Ken and Shirley's to help them celebrate their anniversary on Sunday.

leaders to be used for charitable purposes. I had included the winner of the sweater in a previous, but was not aware of the heart-warming story behind the donation. Thank you for that and your kind words on my column Alec and Elizabeth.

Thanks also to Sonny and Leola Pacey for their help for the second time, when Jim and I ran into problems with our well. It is good to have kind neighbours who don't grumble when we go disturbing their peace with our problems.

The LOOP brochures and directories are now in circulation. A new design for the logo and a lot more information and maps. make it a very attractive little folder. In conjunction with Glamorgan Township the LOOP now has an information booth at Gooderham, (next to the L.C.B.O. outlet) staffed by Angie Waugh. Angie is a student at Haliburton High School and with her knowledge of the local area, will be a good representative to tourists visiting the LOOP.

The euchre players at Highland Grove enjoyed the luxury of air conditioning in the humid heat on Monday night. One should bring a sweater, however, as it is quite a contrast.

Winners with highest scores were Jack Wright and Pat Grant. Most lone hands to Kaye Heaton and George Grant. Low score to Nellie Jones and Al Heaton and the travelling prize to Doris Brown.
